MANY CHEER MOLLISONS IN NEW YORK

Great Noise Made By Police Sirens

Jim Mollison Wears Bandages on Head Where He Suffered Injuries in Crash

Associated Press

New York, Aug. 1.—Behind screaming police sirens and under a generous dosing of confetti and ticker tape, Capt. and Mrs. James A. Mollison, famous British flying couple, rode the heroes' route to the City Hall here to-day for an official reception and two of the city's shining gold medals.

Police estimated 200,000 lined Broadway from The Battery to City Hall Park as the noisy parade passed up the canyon-like thoroughfare. Crowds shouted "Cheerio, Amy," and "Attaboy, Jim."

Mrs. Mollison told one of the city officials accompanying their automobile she "just loved" to heard the sirens of the police escort, and so orders were given to turn the noise makers on full blast.

WEARS BANDAGES

Pilot Mollison still wore the bandages placed on his forehead after the recent crash of the couple at Bridgeport, after their transatlantic flight.

The medals were presented by Mayor John P. O'Brien, who congratulated the fliers on their escape from more serious injury.

"Your honor," said Mrs. Mollison, as she received her medal, "I'm frightfully nervous about all this, but I can't run away."

Harriman Hearing In New York Adjourned

Associated Press

New York, Aug. 1.—Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey to-day adjourned the inquiry into the mental condition of Joseph W. Harriman, indicted banker, until August 29.

The court's action followed information from Dr. Menas S. Gregory of Bellevue Hospital, to the effect Harriman was in danger of death yesterday evening following his collapse in court.

Third of Civic Tax Levy Now Collected

Heavy Month-end Payments Swell Advance Total to All-time Record

Counter Bond Sale Launched To-day Meets Ready Response From Investors

More than $30,000 in current taxes was paid in at the city treasury yesterday, swelling collection totals to a new all-time high level for this time of the year.

The record books show collections at the end of business yesterday to be $575,667.89 which is approximately 33 per cent of the total tax levy.

Two cashiers were kept busy throughout the day receiving payments.

Last year's collection at the end of July was $529,193.54 and that had been the best year for early prepayments since the system was started eleven years ago.

Officials said they expected the exceptionally good showing in tax collections would have a beneficial effect in proving the soundness of city bonds, of which a $227,000 "over-the-counter" sale was launched this morning.

Within the first two hours of the sale applications for 17,200 of the debentures had been filed. These were in fifteen different lots, for amounts ranging from $100 to $5,000. The bonds have been printed in $100, $500 and $1,000 debentures, enabling small investors to secure them without trouble.

The issue is to refund maturing serial debentures and is for a fifteen-year term, expiring on July 31, 1948, and bearing interest at 5½ per cent.

FIRE HAZARD IN B.C. INTERIOR

Forest fires up to last week-end numbered 415, according to forestry officials to-day. This compares with 617 at this time last year and 1,422 for the corresponding period in 1931.

Prince Rupert and Prince George districts are giving little cause for worry to forest rangers and the week-end rains were beneficial to the Coast areas, but conditions in the southern interior are hazardous and close watch is being kept on danger spots, officials said.

CLARK GABLE HAS OPERATION

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 1.—Clark Gable, film star, underwent a successful operation for removal of his appendix to-day.

HOLIDAY RESORT PIER DESTROYED

RESTAURANT MEN PUZZLED

Some Decide Not to Collect Meal Tax After Ultra Vires Ruling

No Instructions From Government Yet and Others Impose Fee

The Jones meal tax was not collected in several Victoria restaurants to-day.

Following the decision of Magistrate J. A. Findlay in Vancouver yesterday, ruling the Hospitals Aid Act ultra vires, some individual proprietors decided not to levy the fee.

In the meantime plans were made for a meeting of the association of hotel men and restaurant proprietors to decide whether concerted action would be taken. Some of them are in a quandary as to whether they should collect the tax or not, as they said they have had no instructions from the government and presume they should keep on collecting it.

They said, however, that if any person refused to pay the tax, they would not be pressed.

"What we want to do is get the news over to the U.S. side as quickly as possible, because the tax has hurt our tourist business," declared one restaurant man, who said he did not collect the fee.

Government officials expressed no opinion as to whether the restaurant men were acting unlawfully or not in this respect. They were awaiting the decision of the Attorney-General regarding a possible appeal from the Magistrate's ruling.

CATTLE RUSTLERS ARE CHECKED

Associated Press

Onak., Wash., Aug. 1.—Rustling was dealt a deathblow in Okanogan County yesterday with enactment of a county ordinance making registration of stock brands mandatory, says Sheriff B. T. McCauley.

Inspection stations have been established at county shipping outlets, and the ordinance makes rustling almost impossible. Rustlers who steal and butcher animals before selling the meat are expected to offer officials another problem.

U.S. SENATOR'S SON ENDS LIFE

Archibald M. Johnson Shoots Himself at His Home in California

Associated Press

Hillsborough, Calif., Aug. 1.—Archibald M. Johnson, younger son of United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart at his home here early to-day. The body was found in a chair, a revolver nearby.

Johnson was divorced by his wife at Reno June 13. She afterward was married to Commander Howard A. Flanigan of the United States navy. She is believed now to be in Washington, D.C.

Johnson was a former Olympic Club athlete and polo player and formerly ran horses at the Tanforan racetrack under his own colors. He held the rank of major during the Great War and was wounded. He was recently listed as one of eighty-four San Francisco attorneys who had failed to pay license fees.

BOMBS DROPPED ON TRIBAL VILLAGE

Simla, India, Aug. 1.—Four squadrons of British bombing planes dropped bombs on Kotkai village of the Bajauri tribe on the northwest frontier to-day following the tribesmen's failure to surrender three alleged ringleaders of an agitation.

No other places were attacked, although it was said the places would be ready for another attempt in a few hours to bring the tribes to book. If the air operations prove futile, troops are expected to be put into the field.

The agitators are accused of stirring unrest among the Bajauri and Mohmand tribes, and against the king of Afghanistan.

High explosive bombs were used in the first attacks.

Biggest Upswing Seen In Some Time Carries Figures Nine Cents Higher

May Wheat Closes at 94¾ Cents and October at 89; At Chicago Wheat Futures Jump Permissible Maximum of 5 Cents; Weather on Canadian Prairies Causes Anxiety

Canadian Press

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Opening with an outburst of buying and closing with an impressive upward flourish wheat prices on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange to-day soared 9 to 9⅛ cents. Last-minute word of good export business, combined with reports of frost and generally bullish weather, and Chicago's action to halt further downturns, to hoist prices for their best gain in some days.

The buoyant upswing took October to 89 cents, December to 90¾ and May to 94¾.

The bullish triumph was based on action of Chicago and on a chilly prairie weather map in early dealings. Late in the session came word that 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been sold for export and prices took another spurt to close almost at the top.

Liverpool marched along with the bullish parade and chalked up advances of 1¼ to 1⅜ pence.

OFFERINGS LIGHT

Buyers had little to check their enthusiasm and offerings throughout the session were light. Trading began on a large scale, then quieted down for most of the session.

The customary leader of the coarse grains, flax, staged a stirring rally that swept it up a maximum of 18 cents. Rye, oats and barley followed suit. Cash grains were firm.

AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Wheat, after dropping for three successive days the maximum of five cents permitted under Chicago Board of Trade regulations, to-day did a right-about-face and jumped up five cents a bushel. Other grains also climbed the maximum permitted.

Traders gave as the reason for the change in the market trend the returned confidence of buyers as result of action of the directors of the board yesterday evening in setting limits below which grain prices could not go. They adopted the closing prices of yesterday for all grains as the deadline. These prices will remain as the mimimums until August 15, unless the directors decided before that date to change the prices. In that case they agreed to give three days' notice before setting new prices.

PRAIRIE WEATHER

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Vagaries of the weatherman increased apprehension for the prairie crops, as wheat lands, which last week baked under a sizzling sun, shivered to-day, with reports of frost yesterday evening in some areas.

Little rain fell overnight. The Pas, Man., Prince Albert, Sask., and Calgary, were the only points to receive any precipitation.

Wheat areas of Saskatchewan, where the grain is less advanced, faced the possibility of frost. Battleford yesterday reported a minimum reading of 32 and Saskatoon and Regina 33. Manitoba's minimum was 38 at Brandon. Banff, Alta., slipped under the freezing line at 31.

NEWSPAPER SUPPRESSED

Breslau, Germany, Aug. 1 (Associated Press).—The district governor to-day suppressed the Jewish community official organ until further notice.

SOO HOLLYHOCKS ARE SKYSCRAPERS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 1.—Jack's mythical beanstalk has nothing over some of the hollyhocks displayed at the Soo here this summer. In a competition for high hollyhocks, J. Pilkington entered stalks which measured 11½ feet high. Others are well over the 10-foot mark.

NAVY ESTIMATES OF JAPAN ARE RECORD

One-third Greater Than Previous Biggest in Nation's History; Army Appropriations Also Will Set Record; Great Deficit in Prospect

Associated Press

Tokio, Aug. 1.—The largest naval estimates in Japan's history were presented to the finance ministry to-day by the navy ministry for inclusion in the empire's 1934-35 budget, which is now being drafted, it was learned authoritatively.

Included are 180,000,000 yen (currently $53,000,000 in Canadian funds) for new construction and 75,000,000 ($22,500,000) for the modernization of capital ships.

For the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1934, the navy is demanding a total of 680,000,000 yen ($203,000,000), exceeding by 30 per cent the largest previous estimates, those of 1921-22 prior to the Washington conference, when Japan strained her resources to compete with the United States and Great Britain in the capital ship race.

HUGE ARMY OUTLAYS

The army likewise is demanding record appropriations for 1934-35. It is authoritatively reported the army wants 560,000,000 yen ($166,000,000), with a deficit of 1,000,000,000 yen ($300,000,000), will be surpassed.

The estimated cost of the naval programme between April 1, 1934, and March 31, 1937, is 670,000,000 yen.

The construction contemplated for these three years includes two 8,500-ton six-inch gun cruisers; two 10,000-ton air-carriers; fourteen 1,400-ton destroyers; six submarines; and one 5,000-ton minelayer. In addition there are eleven auxiliaries in non-treaty categories, for a total of thirty-six vessels.

The navy also is planning on eight new air squadrons, which would make a total of thirty-nine squadrons, compared with seventeen in 1931.

FUNDS FOR WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—A sum of $150,000 to be advanced the city of Winnipeg by its bank will be made available to the civic unemployment relief works committee. It will be used to aid unemployed home owners, many of whom face loss of their houses because of tax arrears.

The Canadian dollar declined ⅜ of a cent to close at 92½ cents. The premium in United States currencies advanced to 8 per cent as against Canadian funds.

KING URGES VOTERS ANALYZE PROMISES

Liberal Leader Says C.C.F. Could Not Carry Out Programme Without Making Great Changes in Canada's Constitution, and That Would Be Impossible

Shellbrook, Sask., Aug. 1.—"Don't get carried away by promises," says Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King to the voters of this constituency of Prince Albert—his own—and the rest of Canada.

The C.C.F. programme of state control and direction, the Liberal leader told a large picnic audience here yesterday evening, could not possibly be brought about legally except by changing the constitution, and that could not be accomplished without the provincial legislatures' agreement and the support of the Senate and the House of Commons.

"Do you think the Senate, with its conservative majority, would agree to such a thing?" he asked.

Either the C.C.F. would achieve its ends, assuming it attained power, by legal and constitutional means, or by illegal methods, he said. If it worked in the legal way, its programme could not possibly be carried out except over a long period of time. Would anyone waste a vote on such a proposal?

BULL FIGHT IN IDAHO TOWN

Rodeo Promoters Assure State Governor It Will Be Only Burlesque

Associated Press

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 1.—Rexburg is going ahead with its bull fight, as announced, but acting Governor George E. Hill has been advised it will be a burlesque.

He telegraphed for information on the proposed spectacle to be staged during the golden jubilee rodeo at Rexburg, which begins to-day, after the American Humane Association had complained in a telegram from Albany, N.Y.

"We appeal to you as governor of a great state to prevent anything in the way of a bull fight," the association telegraphed the governor, "whether real, modified or burlesque."

However, the governor said, he did not intend to interfere as he was assured by Mayor Arthur Porter of Rexburg that the show was not such as to "offend the sensibilities of the citizens of that section."

NANAIMO HEARS RELIEF PROTEST

Men Decline to Work For Allowances Unless They Are Higher

(Special to The Times)

Nanaimo, Aug. 1.—Mayor Barsby presided over the city council yesterday evening in a session which was the longest for several years. A delegation of married unemployed was received, protesting against the unemployed committee's request that men work for a share of government relief.

A. Jordan, spokesman for the delegation, said an agreement was entered into two months ago that men be given scrip for government's share of relief. The present amount was inadequate to keep body and soul together but if the allowance were increased 50 per cent, the men would be willing to work, he said. The speaker presented a resolution from married unemployed protesting the action of the council unemployment committee. Another objection presented by delegation was the prying into wages of young men and women of unemployed families by the city engineer.

James Drummond of Victoria wrote asking the council to procure him lease of property on the waterfront for the purpose of a swimming pool. This was left in abeyance until Mr. Drummond appears before the council.

The government refuses to reveal how much the tax that was to solve British Columbia's hospital problems has realized, but is far below expectations and the hospitals will receive nothing like the amount taken off their grants. Two hundred thousand dollars was mentioned as the estimated revenue from the tax when it was introduced.

Decision is hourly awaited by the government on the Privy Council's ruling on the fuel oil tax, but Attorney-General Pooley denies that if it is thrown out as ultra vires the meal tax and the 1 per cent wage levy will also go.

The enthusiasm to secure Liberal nominations is taken as one of the most striking signs of the prospects of a Liberal victory. They expect Liberalism to be triumphant at the next election. Nobody has been fighting to secure a nomination on the Tolmie, Bowser or C.C.F. tickets, says one political observer.

Liberals offer a diversified list of candidates seeking honors at the next provincial election. Including A. M. Manson, K.C., and F. M. MacPherson, whose nominations for Omineca and Cranbrook respectively are assured, the list includes five merchants, one mine manager, two journalists, one surveyor, six farmers, three physicians, five lawyers, three insurance agents, two garage proprietors, one lumberman, one dentist, one retired, one druggist, one railroad engineer, one professor and one financial agent.

Several organizations in the Okanagan have written to Liberal headquarters requesting G. G. McGeer, K.C., who it is anticipated will be a Liberal candidate in Vancouver, make a speaking tour of the valley.

George M. Murray, Liberal candidate for Lillooet, is back from Regina where he has been reporting the World's Grain Fair.

Having been barred from his position at the U.B.C. Summer School by the ruling prohibiting professors from politics, Dr. Allan Harris, the young scientist Liberal candidate in South Okanagan, is busy campaigning in the constituency where it is expected he will oppose Hon. J. W. Jones, Minister of Finance.

The three step plan under which the C.C.F. operates makes a big step from the affiliated groups to the Dominion executive, it has been pointed out. The district council is made up of one delegate from each affiliated group. A provincial council is selected from the district councils on the basis of one member for each seat provided for the area in the Legislature. Nine members are elected annually from the provincial council to form the provincial executive and one member from each province is elected to form the Dominion executive.

The constitution is clear on the subject of Socialism as it applies to candidates for all public bodies. The candidates must receive the approval of the provincial executive of nine which has power to pass upon their qualifications. The executive has power to pass upon their qualification of the fundamental principles of Socialism.

tral bank, establishment of an investment control board, control of industry so it would function in the public interest—these were in the Liberal programme. The Liberal Party believed the present problem was one of distribution, not production, and would attack it from that point of view.

In discussing the central bank, Mr. King expressed the opinion the present banking system had not functioned in such a way as to satisfy all the banking requirements of the people. On the other hand, the present banking system was a good one. It should be used.

A central bank would supervise currency and credit.

BAD GOVERNMENT

"We have had drought, grasshoppers and lots of other bad things, but worst of all, a bad government, Mr. King told his audience with a smile. He charged the government with strangling trade by high tariffs.

FORM OF DICTATORSHIP

Under the Bennett Government a form of dictatorship was being practiced. With hard times as an excuse, the present government had taken to itself powers which were autocratic in their nature and which had the effect of depriving the people's representatives of their right to run the country.

And, said the Liberal leader, partly as a result of this dictatorial attitude of the government, a new threat had arise in the country. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, with promises beside which those of Mr. Bennett at the last election were mild, was proposing to revolutionize conditions in Canada.

"There is danger of setting up another dictatorship," said Mr. King. "We've got to watch the situation in this country. Once you give arbitrary powers you are in danger of getting what they have in Russia."

BACK TO PROPER BASIS

The important thing to do now was to get back to responsible government in Canada. "Parliament is just what you make it," he said. "If you have high tariffs and increased taxation today it is because those who supported Mr. Bennett at the last election gave him power to impose these things."

He objected to the government making agreements with foreign countries which, he claimed, would bind the Canadian people. "What on earth right has the Prime Minister to go to England and make agreements which will affect our well-being without the consent of Parliament? he asked.

He asserted trade agreements entered into at the Imperial Conference were approved by the government and parliament was told to pass them. The people's control of their own affairs had been taken away.

"Are we going to vote for a government which did that?" he asked, referring to the strangulation of trade by high tariffs. "I do not think many people who voted for Mr. Bennett and his government last time will do it next time. I am not afraid of that."

BENNETT BUGGIES

Before Mr. King spoke, Omer Demers, Liberal candidate in the provincial constituency of Shellbrook, said the only achievement to which the present government could point was "the manufacture of Bennett buggies and Anderson carts."

"We want to get back on a basis where we can put an engine back in the buggy and run it with gas," he said.

The garden party at which Mr. King spoke was held on the lawn of Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Sutherland at Shellbrook. Mrs. Sutherland presided and in addition to Mr. King and Mr. Demers, T. C. Davis, formerly a member of the Saskatchewan government, gave a brief address.

This afternoon the Liberal leader will speak at Debden. This evening he will address a mass meeting at Canwood.

allowance to keep them in comfort without being compelled to compete in the open labor market. These pensioners, if fit and conditions warrant, would be absorbed into the labor market.

AID TRADE WITH BRITAIN

Cowichan Branch No. 53 will introduce a resolution urging that the Canadian Legion favor a reduction in tariffs in order to accomplish the object of increasing trade with Great Britain.

Until the entry into Canada of British goods is facilitated by drastically cutting down tariff barriers, it will be urged, there will be little hope of extending the market for Canada's primary products in the mother land.

The convention will be asked by the Cowichan branch to press for Canadian co-operation in any international action having as its purpose the restoration of commodity prices by depreciating the value of gold. This, it is claimed, would accomplish the result inflationists seek to achieve in an orderly and logical manner.

Some form of controlled inflation will also be advocated by the Cowichan branch. That it would be sound monetary policy on the part of Canada to prepare to manage her currency on a paper basis, so that the most suitable could be maintained from the standpoint of both foreign department repayment and trading purposes, will be recommended by the Cowichan branch. The advisability of establishing a central bank to accomplish this purpose will also be suggested.

Abbotsford Branch No. 15 will request the Provincial Command to endeavor to make necessary arrangements for a group life insurance scheme to be available to members of the organization.

Revaluation of houses erected under the soldiers' housing scheme, when prices were at their peak, will be asked by New Westminster No. 2.

A similar resolution on the better housing scheme will also be introduced by Nanaimo Branch No. 10.

Britannia Branch No. 7 will urge that the Dominion constitution be amended to allow active participation by veteran branches in the election of candidates without regard whatsoever for their political faith, provided they support the cause at Ottawa and consultation be taken with Provincial and Dominion commands before action is taken by any branch.

Delegates to the convention, it was stated to-day at the Pro Patria branch headquarters, will commence arriving in the city to-morrow from all sections of the province and the northwestern states.

The provincial executive will meet at Britannia branch Wednesday night following a dinner tendered by the Victoria district council.

The council has decided that the legion will not officially participate in the community service and lantern slide display in Beacon Hill Park Sunday night depicting Victoria's part in the World War.

Abducted Man Is Driven Long Distance and Freed

C. F. Urschel, Millionaire, Back in Oklahoma City After Unwelcome Experience; Ransom Paid

Associated Press

Oklahoma City, Aug. 1.—Charles F. Urschel, forty-year-old oil millionaire, released by abductors today on payment of an unannounced ransom, declared his eyes had been taped during his nine days' captivity and he did not know where he had been taken by the abductors.

Urschel said he knew only that the abductors had driven him several hundred miles and freed him in the night near Norman, about thirty miles from Oklahoma City.

Urschel would not discuss the ransom, but Arthur Seeligson, friend of the Urschel family and chief intermediary, said definitely a payment had been made. Seeligson refused to reveal the amount or details of the negotiations.

When Urschel came home early today he was unharmed—and silent.

He strode out of the rain across his threshold at the stroke of midnight ending nine days as the hostage of kidnapers whose machine-gun men rushed him from a bridge game in his house the night of July 22.

Then, with but brief greetings for a wildly jubilant family, he went to bed—"in good health, but very tired," said a spokesman.

Acting swiftly, ten operatives of the federal government and every available police investigator swung back into the manhunt. For a week they had shunned the house in deference to Mrs. Urschel's plea that nothing be done to retard the private negotiations.

POLICE TRAP

Albany, N.Y., Aug. 1.—A trap to catch the men who abducted John J. O'Connell Jr., July 7, was set more than two weeks before the youth was released when District Attorney John T. Delaney named a list of go-betweens suggested by the political family of the National Guard officer. Two of those on that list, Manney Strewl and Joe Curro, now are in custody.

Mr. Delaney, in a revealing interview to-day, said he had advised the O'Connell family on July 14 to let him select a list from which the abductors of the boy could name a negotiator. Delaney picked out twelve names, including in it men he believed could have had a part in the abduction.

Strewl, who handled the $40,000 ransom money and affected the release of O'Connell in New York City, is "helping the police," Delaney asserted. To a question, "will he be booked on a charge?" the prosecutor said:

"Yes, we'll eventually charge him."

Delaney said he believed a group in Albany had conceived the plot and employed an out-of-town mob to carry it out.

It was learned yesterday evening Strewl had been detained. He had been missing since Sunday afternoon and even his family did not know of his whereabouts until it was learned he was being held for questioning.

Louis Snyder, Albany attorney, who acted as counsel for Strewl while he was negotiating with the kidnapers, said earlier to-night he had been called on by his client's mother to find him.

NEW YORK PENALTIES

Albany, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Moved by the abduction of John J. O'Connell Jr., almost in the shadow of the state capitol, Governor Herbert H. Lehman asked the New York Legislature yesterday evening to provide the death penalty for kidnapers in some instances and life imprisonment in others.

The Governor urged the fight against "snatchers" be carried on even if it should involve endangering the persons they are holding.

Hyde Park, N.Y., Aug. 1.—President Roosevelt opened a special inquiry into means of battling the abduction racket in a conference to-day with Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of State.

Leader, Wife and Thirty-three of Followers in Custody

Associated Press

Ahmedabad, India, Aug. 1.—M. K. Gandhi, his wife and thirty-three followers, were arrested by civil authorities to-day at the outset of their new disobedience campaign for Indian independence, but their early release on parole was considered likely.

Their plans to march to the village Ras in the Kaira district, where they hoped to gain converts for the individual movement ,were thwarted when the aged little leader was taken into custody at the home of a wealthy mill owner, Seth Ranchooddass, his host.

Of considerable import was the fact that they were arrested under provisions of ordinary law, whereby they became state prisoners to be detained at the government's pleasure. If a parole is broken, they must stand an open trial.

The followers were sleeping at the Ashram, or college of devotees, at Sabarmati, and were taken to the Sabarmati jail, where the leader also was incarcerated.

IN JAIL

Poona, India, Aug. 1.—M. K. Gandhi and all members of his college of devotees were lodged in the Sabarmati jail at Ahmedabad after their arrest to-day, shortly before they were to start a new civil disobedience campaign. The leader will be brought back to his familiar quarters in Yeroda jail here.

Subsequently he will be released under an order restraining him from leaving the district and forbidding any activity in connection with the disobedience campaign.

C.C.F. Leader Addresses Rotary Club of Vancouver on Problems

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Invitation to Canadian business men to view the facts of the present economic situation was issued by James S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg M.P. and leader of the Canadian Commonwealth Federation, to the Vancouver Rotary Club at a luncheon meeting to-day.

He asked them to view a situation not political but economic. He told them primary commodities, according to authentic figures, had fallen to a quarter of what they were in the years 1923 to 1925. He asked them to consider the shrinkage in foreign trade to one-third of its value in 1929 and to ponder on the fact that the world's supply of primary products was double what it was seven years ago.

In his first public appearance in Vancouver since he and the party he leads took a place in the political spotlight, Mr. Woodsworth addressed an audience representative of business and professional life. He told his hearers the response to his party's call in the east had been answered by hundreds of business men.

The old parties, he said, generally speaking, stood for the system as it was. He and his followers did not think that system could meet the present situation. He would not deny achievements of the old system in the last 150 years, but to-day he believed there was something fundamentally wrong. The whole world was at a standstill.

Canadian Press

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 1.—A plea from her fellow actors to come back to Hollywood, "be a good trouper and let the show go on" was telegraphed today to Sylvia Sidney, motion picture actress, who yesterday refused to resume work on a picture in which she is co-starred with Maurice Chevalier, and boarded a plane for New York.

The telegram asking Miss Sidney to reconsider her walkout was sent by the executive committee of the actors' branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and was signed by Adolphe Menjou, Chester Morris, Warner Baxter, Hedda Hopper and Reginald Barlow.

The actors' committee advised Miss Sidney there was a possibility of a battle between Paramount Studios, where she is employed, and the actors who have been employed in her picture. The telegram urged her to return if humanly possible and complete her engagement, so many needy people thrown out of employment because of her action might be kept at work.

CODE FOR U.S. RETAIL STORES

By James Cope
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 7.—A million new jobs, scattered through retail shops, big and small, from end to end of the United States, were held possible to-day because Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, had ordered into immediate effect hour-reducing, wage-raising agreements presented by the shopkeepers of the country.

Dwarfing even the agreements on fair practice in steel and oil, the new codes had swept into the industrial control movement all the organized dealers in foodstuffs, furniture, clothing, shoes, hardware, drygoods, department stores, specialty shops and mail order houses.

Officials estimated application of these codes would provide 1,000,000 new jobs, the retail lines represented employing 4,000,000 men and women.

The food dealers, by Johnson's order, will have a forty-eight-hour week, and the rest just forty.

The match was carried out, however, with Norman Hart as the English substitute, for settlement of an undetermined number of side bets.

"Newsy" Bernard Listed For Trial in Vancouver After Police Court Hearing

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Benjamin (Newsy) Bernard, charged with shooting at Robert Bracken with intent to do grievous bodily harm and wounding, was committed for trial late yesterday by Magistrate J. A. Findlay on both charges.

Bracken, publisher of a weekly newspaper here, was allegedly assaulted on the night of July 14 by Bernard, who is said to have fired a shot at Bracken and then beaten him about the head and face with a revolver.

According to evidence, Bracken, on the night of the alleged assault, was about to get into his car, which was parked in the 700 block of Granville Street, accompanied by his wife, when he was approached by a young man named Swanson. A few minutes later Bernard came up and said to Bracken: "You lay off of me."

Bracken replied with: "Wait till somebody's laying onto you."

Bernard, according to witness, then said, "Somebody's been telephoning up. You lay off of me," and ended the conversation with "I'll get you."

Immediately after there was a shot, according to Bracken, and he grabbed Bernard around the body. The latter is then said to have beaten Bracken about the head and face with a gun, finally escaping.

Bracken stated on cross-examination he had seen a gun in Bernard's hand when the latter was hitting him with it.

Reference by defence counsel to the telephone conversation mentioned by Bernard brought from Bracken the fact he had heard gambling games were being run at a place on Kingsway.

CHESTER S. LORD PASSES AWAY

Famous as Managing Editor of New York Sun For Thirty-three Years

Garden City, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Chester S. Lord, former managing editor of The New York Sun and chancellor of the board of regents of the University of the State of New York, died to-day, in his eighty-fourth year.

Mr. Lord was on the staff of The Sun forty-two years, from 1872 to 1913, and was managing editor of the paper from 1880.

"Boss" Lord, as he was known to two generations of New York newspapermen, was one of the figures of metropolitan journalism responsible for shaping modern newspaper methods.

Mr. Lord was on the Oswego (N.Y.) Advertiser in 1871 as an associate editor.

A year later he made the plunge into New York newspaper work by starting with The Sun at $10 a week. Eight years later, in 1880, he became its managing editor.

When he retired from The Sun in 1913, a single news paragraph appeared in The Sun's columns informing the public. It was the first time a Sun man had ever "made" the news columns of the paper.

TRANSACTIONS LEAD TO TRIAL

Vancouver Magistrate Rules L. Barton Must Face Couple's Charges of Fraud

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Leslie Barton, alias William Smith, no fixed address, was committed for trial in the police court here yesterday on three charges of obtaining money by false pretences from James and Sarah Campbell of Stratford, Ont.

Barton was charged with theft of $7,500 from the Ontario couple in an alleged stock swindle, conspiracy to defraud and conspiracy to steal.

The defence was reserved.

According to evidence given by Campbell, yesterday, he met Barton under the name of Smith in Vancouver on July 6 and Barton said he was looking for a "Major Burbank," supposed New York market speculator, who had made a considerable amount of money for a Judge Baker in Winnipeg several months previously. Campbell testified Barton told him that if this man, who was now in Vancouver, could be located they could make some money in the stock market.

Barton later took Mr. and Mrs. Campbell for a trip around the city by car. As they passed the Shaughnessy Military Hospital, it was testified, Barton stopped the car and, pointing to a man apparently leaving the hospital, said: "There's the man I've been looking for."

The stranger was introduced as Major Burbank. On his suggestion, according to the evidence, the four met the next day in the Regent Hotel, where Burbank gave Barton a paper and an order to buy "corn stock." Barton returned later with a supposed cheque for $500, it was testified. Burbank then handed Barton two cheques for $25,000 each and told him to invest the money. The next day Barton turned over to Burbank, a cheque for $190,000.

MONEY PUT UP

Barton left to cash the cheque, but returned, saying the broker's clerk had taken it back because the two $25,000 cheques were no good. Burbank, according to the evidence, said they would have to raise $50,000 immediately to get delivery of the money allegedly made in the stock deal. According to Campbell, he put up $7,000 in government bonds which were turned into cash, while Barton supposedly contributed $18,000 and Burbank the rest.

The money, in separate envelopes, was given to Barton, who was told by Burbank to get the cheque for $190,000 and buy some more stock, it was testified. Barton returned and said he had made a mistake and that the money was lost, whereupon Burbank handed him $30 and told him to go to Portland, Ore., and get some more money.

Two second-class railway tickets were purchased by Burbank, who gave them to the Campbells and told them to meet him at the Ritz Carleton Hotel, Montreal, after he had flown to New York to see his family and obtain more money.

The trip east proved fruitless for the Ontario couple when Burbank failed to put in an appearance, according to evidence.

Several days later Barton was arrested when he attempted to change a $1,000 bill at a bank here. He had an additional $287 in his possession when taken into custody.

His alleged confederate has not been located by police.

MILK STRIKE IN NEW YORK STATE

Associated Press

Rome, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Violence marked the opening of a milk strike in central and western New York state to-day. State troopers from Watertown used night sticks to disperse strike pickets at Constableville and Glenfield.

Producers held their milk off the market because the state milk control board had refused to grant their demands for a greater share of the retail selling price.

Twenty-five striking dairymen held up a truck on the Boonville-Lowville road and dumped 120 cans of skimmed milk en route to New York. Reports received in this city said other dumping was going on at scattered points.

More than 100 farmers were massed in the vicinity of Boonville, determined, they said, to stop truck shipments from northern points. Forty troopers, on the other hand, were massed in the village, under orders to prevent disorders.

They tell of better mileage they're getting—premium mileage.

They rave about the pick-up and surging power from Super Shell. And how remarkably it smooths out a motor's operation in traffic and on the hills.

This new improved Super Shell gives you premium performance—better performance than the East got in the old Super Shell at 3¢ extra per gallon.

Credit western ingenuity for developing such a gasoline, without any of the wasteful gassy and sluggish parts that cut the efficiency of ordinary gasolines. A super gasoline at the ordinary price! No wonder it's taking the entire country by storm.

AN AMAZING CONCEPTION

If the provincial government seriously cherishes the intentions attributed to it by an article in a Vancouver contemporary, it contemplates a political course without precedent in the records of this country, and brands itself as entirely lacking in constitutional responsibility. According to this article, the government does not intend to contest the province in the approaching election, but reserves the precious privilege of regarding as its candidates any nominees it sees fit, irrespective of their views and pledges to the electors. Even if those candidates have expressly declared themselves to be opposed to the government it proposes to regard them as potential supporters. It may even consider itself to be the overlord of candidates nominated as independents. Hence, notwithstanding the fact that it probably may not have in the field more than two or three candidates who proclaim themselves to be flying its colors, it proposes to cling to office.

This, of course, is midsummer madness, and the bare fact that the cabinet—which is now only a shadow—is actually meditating anything of the kind shows again how utterly hopeless government has become in British Columbia under its present auspices. Even the mock parliament of a junior high school would not contemplate anything so incorrigibly silly. There is not a second year high school boy or girl who does not know that when a government goes to the country with only two or three supporting candidates it has lost its representative status. It can not claim as its candidates anybody who has repudiated it, and it certainly can not retain office unless it commands the support of a majority of the elected representatives.

The leader of the party which has the largest number of elected followers always is called upon by the Lieutenant-Governor to form a government. The Lieutenant-Governor can only consider the result of the election in that light. He can not accept the fantastic theory that no matter how the candidates may designate themselves they are potential supporters of the government, for in such circumstances a ministry could fasten itself permanently upon the country. No government which has been so explicitly repudiated by its own supporters that it can not get even a corporal's guard of candidates to run in its behalf can be permitted to retain office after an election, in any circumstances.

By tolerating anything of this kind the Lieutenant-Governor would be aiding and abetting a condition which would set at defiance all the well-known principles of representative government, and would therefore make himself a political issue in a difficult—and dangerous—situation, in which nobody holding this high office would want to be involved. Evidently the government never has heard of the Family Compact. It ought to devote some time to the reading of a lower school Canadian history text-book. We doubt if ever in the annals of constitutional government in British countries, any government ever has gone to the country with only two or three supporting candidates. In most localities it would have been compelled to resign as soon as its supporters in the House proclaimed publicly by voice or action their refusal to follow it any longer.

This is holiday time and children are enjoying themselves in all the exuberance of youth. Nobody is injured by their activities, plans and excursions. But when the government of a great province tries to bring within this category the important business of a provincial election and the future administration of the province, it is time for the authorities set up by the constitution to protect the public welfare to intervene. Otherwise, the consequences which must be met by the country will be tragic. When a government reaches the conclusion that no matter how much it may be repudiated by its supporters it is entitled to remain in power, that there is no special significance if it enters an election with only two or three candidates out of forty-seven, it announces its complete incompetence to bear the responsibilities of office. In no other province in Canada would such a situation be permitted to develop. If the government is unable to inspire sufficient support to enable it to contest at least a majority of the seats of this province in the forthcoming election, it should get out, voluntarily—or involuntarily.

WANTS CHURCH DISESTABLISHED

The recent celebration of the centenary of the Oxford Movement—which, of course, is nothing whatever to do with the Oxford Group Movement—was marked by a striking sermon from Dr. Hensley Henson, the Bishop of Durham, in St. Mary Abbott's at Kensington, London, England. His words are so liberally charged with wisdom and sound thinking that we reprint them here:

"I submit that the issue of spiritual liberty is to-day, even more plainly than when Keble felt moved to preach his famous sermon, the paramount issue for English Churchmen.

"We may thankfully recognize that, since the rejection of the revised prayer book, the Church of England has been treated by successive governments with the utmost consideration. The prison has been made as comfortable as possible, and the church's fetters have been, as far as the case admitted, decorously veiled. Indeed, I do not remember any time in my life when the state has shown itself more complaisant in the matter of official and quasi-official pageantry.

"But the church is not free, and its irreducible demand is for freedom. Freedom means for us in England the end of the state connection, disestablishment. The existing situation is inconsistent with the church's efficiency, wounds the self-respect of churchmen, and alienates the consciences of many honest folk.

"The clergy do not command the respect to which their office and their work entitle them, because they are ever seen in the odious character of men who set lightly by their own moral obligations. They are admitted to pastoral office on conditions which they can not frankly accept. They make declarations which they can not but discount by mental reservations. They are bound by rubrics which they do not mean to obey; and are made subject to legal authorities which they may conscientiously repudiate.

"The clergy are at cross purposes with their parishioners. Their ministry proceeds in an atmosphere of suspicion, misgiving, and mutual misunderstanding. In such circumstances a favorable soil is provided for the growth of individualism and popular agitation, and the credit of religion is lowered by many scandals.

"The evil affects the whole process of our ecclesiastical life. We are ever thinking and speaking and voting with divided minds. Perforce we seek not what is right in itself, nor yet what is best for the church, but what is most likely to secure approval of Parliament, what will not excite the fretful and suspicious Protestantism of the masses.

"The appropriate denouement of this centenary celebration should be a serious effort to enfranchise the Church of England by bringing the present union of church and state to an end."

Canon Hensley's observations suggest that he considers the Church of England handicapped by its association with the state. Obviously his argument supports disestablishment, so that the church will have a free hand, that it will not have to conform to ancient shibboleths. And, after all, he implies, what has the church to do with civil government? Government, which is dictating to the church, should take a leaf out of the church's book.

"TOMMY" CRAMP PASSES ON

Those former members of labor movements—Trades Unions—in Great Britain who have come to live in Canada and become Canadians no doubt heard with genuine regret of the death of "Tommy" Cramp, as he was familiarly known. His real name was Concemore Thomas Cramp, and his official title was general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, successor to Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions.

As The New York Times says, Cramp was an important factor in the British railway strike in 1919, the miners' strike in 1921, the railway strike in 1924, and the great general strike in 1926. Then the New York daily quotes Cramp:

> Disillusioned after the last strike, I do not believe that a general industrial strike can ever be carried out effectively, because if the workers carried it to its logical conclusion they would soon starve and paralyze themselves as well as everybody else.

Cramp was a man of Kent. He was fifty-seven years old. And, as The Manchester Guardian, speaking of his associations, says: "No man counted more in his party's executive, or at a conference, than Cramp." We read further:

> He took a special interest in the international side of the party's affiliations, was one of its representatives on the Labor and Socialist International, for which and for the International Transport Workers' Federation, of which he was twice president, he traveled widely. In 1929 when Mr. Thomas joined the Labor Government, Cramp succeeded him on the General Council of the Trades Union Congress, where a new field of public activity was opening up for him.
> At home he sat as a representative on many committees and commissions, including the Balfour Committee on Industry and Trade, the Commission on Lotteries, and the recent government inquiries into the iron and steel industries and rationalization. His main service, however, was to the railwaymen. His skill in negotiation, though shown in other ways than that of Mr. Thomas, was great, and exercised with peculiar success through the complicated conciliation machinery under which the industry has worked since the war. He had a good deal of personal charm, great cheerfulness, and a ready wit. His mind was receptive and broadened, largely through his international contacts. Though he was no theoretician, he had a good grasp of economics and admirable gifts of quiet, convincing exposition. In later years, like other men who had moved across from the Left, he was a strong opponent of Communism and held firmly to the broad path of constitutional Socialist advance. Some of his last speeches were devoted to the German peril to labor.

It is not exaggeration to say that "Tommy" Cramp was a good fellow. He had his failings. At one time he was what is now called a "red." But he was sound through and through.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

ZIONISM IN DANGER
The Fortnightly Review

Zionist leaders who only a short while ago were rubbing their hands gleefully at the sight of the rush of private capital into Palestine have now been obliged themselves to raise their voices against the new peril and to "launch a severe fight against the operations of the speculators and brokers forcing up the prices of citrus land and groves." The very purpose of Zionism is at present in danger of being defeated. Palestine threatens to become a sort of foreign colony for Jewish capital, and the National Home for the Jewish people, a home for Jewish investment and speculation—a very different thing indeed from the dream of Dr. Herzl and of the other idealists of that great folk movement.

SUN STILL SHINING
The Toronto Star

Yet the sun is still shining—that is the thing to remember. And it is shining on a world with a tough old constitution, a constitution which may not rally from a bad attack of indigestion as rapidly as some of the cheer-leaders assure the public it is momentarily about to do, but which, on the other hand, is not going to be sick beyond remedy if the consulting specialists at the economic conference fail to agree. There will be changes—of course there will be changes. There will be depressions—this is by no means the last of them. But gradually and over a period of years the world will progress toward better things and better times. So far as the present is concerned, the public will look for and welcome every sign of recovery, with the assurance that if better days do not come with the rapidity which the super-optimists promise, they will come with a certainty which will refute much of to-day's pessimism.

A THOUGHT

> God's mercy is a holy mercy which knows how to pardon sin, not to protect it.—Bishop Reynolds.

Loose Ends

It's all the fault of the newspapers and something must be done about it—love is free to all in this enlightened age—great men go off the deep end—and I have some confidential information for anglers only.

By H. B. W.

UNDERMINED

SOME DISTINGUISHED fellow, whose name I forget, has been writing in the newspapers of the United States to deplore recent revelations concerning the methods of higher finance. He argues that senatorial inquiries into the activities of leading bankers and such things do more harm than good by undermining public confidence and threatening to impair the public's belief in the capitalistic system. The newspapers, he argues, are largely to blame for creating public unrest and cynicism everywhere.

But why stop with higher finance and banking? I feel that the newspapers have done much more damage than most people realize. I mean to say, every time they publish an account of a murder it unquestionably undermines public confidence in our system of justice. Every report of a burglary must disturb public confidence in our police force. These continual reports of divorce have brought the institution of marriage into serious disrepute in many parts of this continent. The discoveries of science, as callously reported in the newspapers, undoubtedly have tended to undermine organized religion. Almost every time the newspapers report a politician's speech in the legislature, public confidence in the whole democratic system sinks to a new low. I cannot help thinking that the service club movement in this city has suffered a grave blow by the news, printed by my colleagues in this paper as a casual midsummer jest, that I was going to address the unhappy Gyro Club. So far as I can see the papers are undermining everything and should be stopped while there is yet time. It isn't safe in our form of civilization for men to hear the truth about themselves.

PROGRESS

IN THE newspapers the other day were two items that show you how civilization has marched gloriously forward in the last century, and how the intelligence of the public has constantly improved. On one of the obscure back pages of The Vancouver Province was a dispatch from London telling how eight love letters of Napoleon to Josephine had been sold at auction for $22,000, which seems a good deal more than that scurvy wench Josephine deserved after the way she treated poor old Nap. Much more interesting to the advanced intellect of this age, worthy of a place on the first page with a large photograph of the lady involved, was a dispatch from New York quoting the film actress, Jeanette McDonald, on the one-and-only subject of Love.

After all, who cares for the drab love life of a dead emperor and his unfaithful spouse when he can hear about the private affairs of a movie queen still alive? Besides, while Napoleon's letters to Josephine were private and confidential, and were filched by a servant after the latter's death, Miss McDonald has nothing to hide. Her love life is an open book for anyone to read with photograph on the front page of the newspapers. She tells, without the least embarrassment, how much she and her manager are in love but how they can't get married because marriage is too risky in Hollywood.

Thus you see how economic conditions and the state of the masses have improved in a century. A century ago no ordinary man could know what the truly great of his time were telling their women, and even now a Napoleonic love letter is worth $2,750; whereas in our enlightened world the truly great tell everything for nothing on the front page. It is, indeed, a delicious age to live in. Love in high places isn't just free—it's heaved at you in great, juicy chunks.

DEEP END

IT IS a continual source of wonder and delight to me how sane men can go off the deep end when they come to mining stocks and politics, particularly politics. I just want to record here, not as a matter of interest, but as a matter of history, what two sane men told me to-day. One of them, an eminent statesman, assured me solemnly that the Tolmie Government would be re-elected and returned in glory at the fall election and offered to bet any sum I liked that it would command a substantial majority in the next legislature, even though it is nominating few candidates and, according to insiders, will depend on the independents for the most part. Another fellow, equally sane, equally hard-boiled, wanted to bet me that the Liberal Party would carry forty out of forty-seven seats.

Of course, my principles prevent me betting, but here is a chance for someone to make a lot of money by taking both bets. And it will be interesting to historians to look back and realize that in the summer of 1933 the most eminent authorities had no real notion what was going to happen at the election three months later, the results of which appeared so utterly obvious and inevitable on the day after the vote. On the day after the poll everyone will have known that nothing else could have happened. To-day men think what they want to think, and generally it is wrong one way or the other.

FOR ANGLERS ONLY

SEVERAL FELLOWS have asked me, purely for information, so that they may plan their holidays accordingly, how I got on with my fishing upcountry. At the risk of losing my reputation as a fisherman altogether, I must tell the truth about this matter so that other Victorians may not suffer similar disillusionment and disaster. For days we followed the Fraser northward. For days we followed the Chilcotin westward, a weary journey over an incredibly rough wagon track to the base of the coast mountains, where the seagulls came in from the sea.

All the way we asked settlers and Indians if there were any fish in this country, and all looked at us with a blank and incredulous expression, as if we were asking for lions and elephants. "Well," said an old man who was fixing a gate fifty miles from his nearest neighbor, "there may be fish and then there mayn't. I ain't sayin' for or against."

No one would say for or against. The Indians kept pointing westward, and westward we went, at the rate of seven miles an hour by count. In every river we tossed our flies and in innumerable lakes, but, while we could get plenty of fish just over the legal limit, we saw none worth our trouble. On one lake a million fish suddenly rose at once, churning up the water like a cauldron for about ten minutes and then subsided, but all of them, so far as we could see, were too small to be worthy of our tackle.

So we came back, like the retreat from Moscow, with empty creels and with a can of salt which we had taken to salt down our surplus supply of fish. It wasn't until we reached Alexis Creek and met a fishery expert of the government that we discovered the truth. "Why," he said, "didn't you know? All the big fish out there died last winter of some curious malady. They were piled up on the shore in thousands."

I have no doubt they read in this indiscreet column that we were coming and couldn't face it. So in the end, after traveling a thousand miles, we caught our fish just down the road from the old ranch in Kelly Lake, which we had always despised. It was a grim chapter altogether which I mention in strict confidence as a warning to other fishermen, who may imagine that distant rivers run deep.

"DOES LAST LONGER"

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

UNPAID

There are so many debts we never pay,
Unthinking, careless through the flying years;
Who can recall the hope of yesterday,
The bliss of laughter or the boon of tears?
The strength that was a staff where we might cling,
The face that was a torch to fire our souls,
Who goes through chance and change, remembering
The loves that lifted him to bygone goals?

There was one hour in the long ago;
It seems another self, another earth.
So far away, so great the debt I owe,
For which I tendered coin of little worth;
My tardy gratitude will never wane,
Though this debt, too, unpaid must still remain!

New York, August 1.—Rising from the ground like a giant bird and darting through the air at express train speed, Henry Farman's aeroplane, the interesting heavier-than-air flying machine brought here from France to demonstrate his ability to fly, made its initial flight in this country late yesterday at Brighton Beach. It rose from an especially constructed runway at the will of the operator, and after attaining a heighth of twenty-five feet, flew straight ahead in a straight line, finally alighting with exquisite grace when the noted operator stopped the motor.

THANKS!

To the Editor:—Please permit me to extend my sincere thanks to all persons who so kindly contributed donations for refreshments, prizes or loaned their cars for the annual picnic for the inmates of the Old Men's Home, which was held last Wednesday afternoon at Goldstream Flats.

All of the aged inmates had a wonderful time and they were very appreciative of the efforts of everyone concerned in giving them such an enjoyable outing. F. LANDSBERG.

SPOILING THE SCENERY

To the Editor:—In the first place I happen to be a small farmer at Gordon Head and last Wednesday, after going to my house for supper, what was my surprise on returning to my strawberry patch to find the countryside covered with handbills advertising some picture at one of the local picture theatres. This advertising I understand afterwards was dropped by an aeroplane. Now, I want to voice my protest at this form of advertising, as it certainly does not do any good as an advertising medium, there are only a few farms in this district and there seemed to me to be thousands of these bills in a very small radius. I presume these handbills were intended for the city, which, had they dropped as intended, would have been more of a nuisance than where they did eventually land. It also seems to me with the money that we are spending at the present time to make this city attractive to our visitors that surely a better way can be found by this theatre to advertise its attractions. I am sure I am voicing the opinion of many of my neighbors that this will be the last of this kind of advertising, as it must have been a waste of money on the theatre's part and a nuisance to the farmer and a detriment to the scenery. CLEAN CITY.

"ONE MAN'S MEAT"

To the Editor:—Is it any use appealing through your columns to an enthusiastic Scot whose passion for his native instrument inspires him to share its strains with all his neighbors on a radius of nearly a mile, by opening all his windows before he starts operations?

I am quite sure he does this out of sheer kindness of heart, assuming that all will enjoy as much as he does those piercing refrains. I certainly do love the bag-pipes when well played before a marching Scots Regiment or on other suitable occasions. But there are times and seasons for such manifestations of patriotism.

You can hear this particular outpouring from Willows Beach to far Gonzales Point, along Newport Avenue, McNeil, Margarte, Deal, Beach Drive, and probably as far as Discovery Island. And the illimitable generosity of the piper is shown in his custom of opening all his windows, that in no direction shall one note or one skirl be missed of the magic music.

Supposing I tuned my violin, or killed my pig every evening, and opened all the windows for it; the police would certainly escort me promptly to Oakalla; yet neither of these indulgences would be so piercingly penetrating or so prolonged.

Couldn't we make a bargain—(a Scot loves a bargain)—and ask him if he would agree to observe the Sawbath at least—by refraining on that day from his accustomed exercise, and I will promise to have no pigs killed within earshot of his wife between now and next Christmas.

No. . . . But seriously, just when the tired business man or woman is resting in the profound peace and beauty of these marvelous Pacific eventides, enjoying the very few times when it is possible in Victoria to sit outside on a summer evening—suddenly blares and shrieks into the heavenly silence this ghastly noise. It is cruel. Surely, he should be compelled to close his windows—it's bad enough even then. TAFFY.

POLICE DOGS

To the Editor:—I thoroughly endorse all "Cave Canem" said in his letter published in The Times Saturday evening re the police dog menace, and would be thankful if the powers that be would do something to thin them out.

Whilst I have not been attacked personally, it does not add to ones peace of mind to encounter these ferocious beasts. And as for small dogs; they have absolutely no chance whatever. Recently a little terrier was so terribly mauled by one of these animals that it had to be destroyed.

Our own small dog was also attacked and badly injured, causing the animal intense suffering for three weeks.

Trusting something will be done about it. "WORRIED."

FAILURE OR SUCCESS?

To the Editor:—The World Conference has failed in the material sense. But in the wider sense its very failure may be of more ultimate worth than would have been any agreement of the old sort.

With all the usual trumpet blast the delegates met. We had the usual hackneyed speeches overflowing with such sonorous phrases as "working towards a common end" and the like. Then the gentlemen got down to business—or so the newspapers reported.

And this "business," it seems, was the discussion of ways and means by which the old, outworn, discredited

TAG DAY FOR RESCUE WORK

Salvation Army Will Make Appeal For Support Saturday

Urgent need for maintenance funds with which to carry on the rescue work of the Salvation Army in this province, has resulted in decision to hold a tag day in the downtown area on Saturday.

On all major street corners, Salvationists and friends will seek public assistance for the work of the army, in bringing aid and comfort to British Columbia girls. During the past year 189 rescue cases have been received and cared for in the province, bringing the total for the last five years to almost 700 unmarried mothers cared for.

The wonderful success that has attended this work in all parts of the world has been a great encouragement to the Salvation Army workers, and it is a phase of work that meets with the commendation of thinking people everywhere.

In recent years the army tag day has proved to be one of the most popular appeals, and the officers of the organization hope that this year a good response will be met with. A good number of taggers have volunteered their services, and Adjutant Sharp, the financial organizer, asks that any others who can help will kindly phone E 8046.

SPORTS HELD BY COLLIERIES

Kiddies Have Enjoyable Day at Picnic Near Cumberland

Special to The Times

Cumberland, August 2.—The Canadian Collieries picnic at the Wye, just outside Cumberland, last Saturday, was an enjoyable day for the children. The programme was arranged almost entirely for their enjoyment and the refreshment stand was well patronized.

The outstanding sports events, and one of the few adult events on the programme, was the Bapco Cup race, a hundred-yard dash for employees only. The first trial resulted in a dead heat between Jack Watson and W. Combs. On the second trial Watson won by a narrow margin.

Other sport results follow:

Boys' race, 6 years—1, Tokugo; 2, H. Aoki.

Girls' race, 6 years—1, Masuayo; 2, Okari.

Boys' race, 8 years—1, R. Gibson; 2, T. Ogaki.

Girls' race, 8 years—1, Valda Frelone; 2, Yoshiki.

Boys' race, 10 years—G. Hirosi; 2, H. Matsukura.

Girls' race, 10 years—1, Gladys Woods; 2, Beverly Gibson.

GIVES LECTURE ON NATIONAL ANTHEM

Hon. J. Hinchliffe Says "God Save the King" Not Always Sung Correctly

In addressing the Middleton British-Israel Guild on the British national anthem yesterday evening, Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, said that when people sang "God Save the King" they utterd a prayer to the deity for the preservation of all the institutions, ideals and characteristics represented by the King.

"The King is a person invested with great authority and immense responsibility," he said. "Therefore, when you pray for the King, you pray for every citizen in the British Empire. We are all united in our allegiance to the King. Therefore, when we sing the National Anthem, we sing a prayer for all the people and the things that he represents."

It was a pity, he said, that so few people sang the National Anthem correctly. The mistake generally made was to sing the last line the same way as the first, whereas the definite article should supplant the pronoun "our." In this manner the King was addressed as the King of all the empire, and not just as King of one particular Dominion. The King also embodied Britsh ideals, British juctice and characteristics, such as faithfulness to duty, national honesty, thoroughness and love of country.

capitalistic system could be continued just as long as we can be persuaded to stand it. One gentleman by the name of Roosevelt so far forgot himself as to suggest that a more up-to-date system might be tried in getting to grips with the depression. The delegates were both angry and hurt at the very suggestion that there might be a fairer system than the one in which the people had been wallowing for a decade and more. And at the blunt statement that the delegates did not seem to be making any particularly sincere effort to end the depression, the gentlemen representing Great Britain, Holland, and, particularly, France, became very indignant indeed.

The conference has failed, they tell us, but it is up to us to decide that question. If we learn the lesson, if we see in our minds' eye the picture of that building packed with frock-coated gentlemen, and among that pontifical crowd only one voice (possibly Russia's too) raised with any sincere desire to better conditions for the common people, only one voice genuinely desirous of getting somewhere by the shortest route, and remember that that voice was swamped by a concerted howl from individuals who have, and always will, toed the line to bankers and corporations and armament firms "back home"—if we remember that, the conference will have been rather too much of a success for the peace of mind of the Neville Chamberlains and R. B. Bennetts of this world.

With 3,000,000 people unemployed, with 3,000,000 people struggling for a decade to buy food and clothing and pay for light, water and rent with the sum of $5 per week, and with a work crying out to be done in the abolition of slums, which are a disgrace to any civilized country, and which even the Prince of Wales admits are a blot on the nation, Mr. Neville Chamberlain stands up in the House of Commons and remarks that there will be no public works programme in Great Britain because the money cannot be raised. And when the gentleman in America suggests that they raise the money as he is in process of doing, the delegates go home.

If the next conference is to "succeed" Roosevelt and his ambassadors must be refused admittance to the hall. The American President has kicked overboard the men who have been doing the damage in the United States, and to him the representatives of the central banks and the representatives of the great corporations and the representatives of the armament trusts who patrol the corridors outside the conference rooms, are so many enemies of humanity and, knowing this, Mr. Roosevelt can only be an inharmonious element to any conference which has for its chief object the fooling of you and me just a little longer.

W. D. SMITH.

GEORGE DENNY BACK IN CITY

Well-known Newspaperman Arrives From San Francisco to Visit His Mother Here

Leaders of Business and Industry Falling in Line on Recovery Programme

Business and industrial leaders of the United States are readily falling in line with the recovery programme launched by President Roosevelt, realizing that only by united action will it be possible to obtain the best results, it is stated by George Denny of San Francisco, who is paying his annual visit to his old home in Victoria.

The general business situation in the United States, he says, is showing a decided change for the better.

Mr. Denny is one of the best known newspapermen on the North American continent. He was formerly associated with The Victoria Daily Times as news editor, and for the last quarter of a century has served the Associated Press in important posts in various parts of the world, including London and Tokio. He has lived in San Francisco for some time acting in an advisory capacity in connection with the Associated Press news service.

Mr. Denny makes a practice of coming to Victoria each year to visit his mother, who resides at 1150 McClure Street. He is registered at the Empress Hotel, and is experiencing a busy time looking up old friends here.

TWO FAMILIES THREATENED

Police Guard Homes in Spokane; Note Demanded $10,000

Associated Press

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 1.—Etortionists have threatened to kidnap members of the wealthy Mrs. August Paulsen and Frank J. Pinucane families unless large payments are made, according to The Spokane Chronicle.

Police have been standing guard over members of the Paulsen family since last week, when a note demanding $10,000 in small bills was shoved under the door of their penthouse on the Medical-Dental Building. The message threatened abduction of an unnamed member of the family if the order was not obeyed.

Police received word a bootlegger was organizing a gang to kidnap Mr. Finucane, The Chronicle said. Officers decided yesterday the plot had been abandoned after keeping the suspected ringleader under surveillance.

The paper said police and federal agents had taken extreme measures to prevent the news of the plots leaking out. The note to Mrs. Paulsen, widow of a wealthy mining man, ordered an answer be inserted in the personal column of The Spokesman-Review, and specified the money should be delivered in a coupe with doors removed at the "Catholic Church in Hillyard."

The advertisement was not inserted. Officers kept the appointment at the church, but waited in vain.

HITS ICEBERG ON RETURN TRIP

Victoria Lawyer Tells of Unsought Experience While Homebound Across Atlantic

H. J. Davis Explains Conflict Over Gold at Economic Conference in London

With the interesting story of the experience of being on an ocean liner when she struck an iceberg while he was on his way home, Harry J. Davis, member of the legal firm of Lawson and Davis, has returned from a tour to England.

Mr. Davis said that after crossing the Atlantic from England and entering the Strait of Belle Isle, the Duchess of Bedford, upon which he was traveling, found herself in the midst of a group of eight large icebergs, which faced the passengers as they came on deck in the morning. At noon a fog descended and this became so thick that everything more than twenty feet ahead was obscured. The big liner was put on very slow speed, but suddenly she grounded on the sunken part of one of the floating ice mountains. The captain ordered the engines of the Duchess of Bedford to go astern and interest among the passengers was intense as they felt the hull of the ship grinding on the berg. Then, with thundering reports which reverberated over the ocean and was echoed by the walls of ice, the berg began to split, dislodging huge blocks.

Mr. Davis said little damage was done to the liner, but the incident gave the passengers an unsought thrill. They commended the captain and the crew for their calmness in handling the collision and for the manner in which they safely extricated the vessel.

With his daughter, Angela, who is remaining in England for a year, Mr. Davis saw some of the tennis at Wimbledon, and saw Miss Dorothy Round win from Helen Wills' Moody, the first set to be lost by the Californian in six years.

TELLS OF CONFERENCE PROBLEMS

On Bond Street he met Premier R. B. Bennett, who gave him an invitation to attend the plenary sessions of the World Economic Conference.

"The leading financial men take the view that the Economic Conference has not broken down and that even yet a satisfactory understanding may be reached," said Mr. Davis. "The men who think for themselves and who know what the world is actually up against, really believe that President Roosevelt is trying to help the Old Country as well as his own and other countries back to prosperity.

"It must be remembered that members of the gold bloc devalued their currency shortly after the war and that Britain and the United States have a long way to go before they are on an equal footing with countries such as France and Italy. It is the view of financial leaders that the United States and Britain have reached a private agreement to bring themselves to an equal currency footing with the countries inside the gold bloc."

It was Mr. Davis's first visit to his old home in England in twenty-eight years. He said that while unemployment was decreasing slowly with spectacular progress in technical advances in various industries, it was felt that the coal industry would never regain its former position. He declared it was sad to see the idle miners, who were facing the situation stoically.

Bond Street and the exclusive shop centres of the West End of London, he found suffering from the depression. He said this was attributed to the fact that the richer spenders now had their resources curtailed by heavy taxation.

BIG BEQUEST FOR EX-QUEEN

Former Queen of Spain Accepts $40,000 From Moore Estate

Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—The former Queen of Spain, an executor announced to-day has accepted a settlement of $40,000 on the $100,000 bequest left her by Alexander P. Moore, one-time United States ambassador to the court at Madrid.

John O. Wicks, the executor of the estate, said he had reached the settlement at a recent conference with Victoria Eugenia Bourbon and her advisers at Fontainebleau, France.

He added, however, that Mrs. Dorothy Caruso Holder, widow of Enrico Caruso, had refused to accept a compromise settlement on a bequest of $40,000 from Moore.

Wicks said that at the time of Moore's death, the estate was worth $1,500,000, but that it since had shrunk to about $700,000. Moore was a former Pittsburgh publisher, who also served as U.S. ambassador to Peru.

BUSINESS WOMEN DISCUSS INTERNATIONAL PROBLEMS

Council of International Federation Concludes Sessions at Chatauqua, N.Y.

Notable Women From Many Countries Contribute to Discussions

Many problems affecting women in general and the business woman in particular were discussed at the council meeting of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, which concluded a week's sessions at Chatauqua, N.Y., Friday, with Miss A. Josephine Dauphinee of Vancouver, Canadian president, representing the Canadian Federation.

NOTED WOMEN PRESENT

Canada, the United States, Austria, Germany, Italy, France, Finland, Spain, Roumania, Brazil, Panama, Turkey, Japan and Latvia were among the nations represented. Notables in attendance included Dame Rachel Crowdy, former chief of the social questions and opium traffic section of the League of Nations; Dr. Marie Munk of Germany, who was Berlin's first woman lawyer and first woman to become a civil judge in Prussia; Mme. Marcelle Kraemer-Bach, French lawyer and feminist; Dr. Marianne Beth, Austria's first woman lawyer, and Selma Ekrem, young Turkish author.

Topics of discussion by the group included The Hague Convention preventing night work for women; the draft convention of the International Labor Conference, which advocates the abolition of fee-charging employment agencies, and the work of the disarmament committees of Women's International Organizations.

SCHOLARSHIP PLAN

Many matters of intra-organization policy also were discussed. Week-end goodwill tours between various countries of Europe to stimulate friendly relationship were advocated by Mme. Andre Dubosq of Paris, chairman of the international committee on hospitality and courtesies. The music and fine arts committee, of which Signora Antonietta Paoli Pogliani of Rome is chairman, asked for the creation of further scholarships to enable artists to receive training in countries other than their own. One such scholarship now exists in the Princess School of the Harp in Rome. It is held by a young Hungarian girl, Luisa Bella.

The possible organization of national and international exhibitions of the work of women during 1933 and 1934 was proposed by Miss Clara Meijers of Amsterdam, chairman of the committee of commercial exchange. The advissability of establishing an international book exchange to give circulation to the books of author-members also was discussed.

Miss Lena Madesin Phillips of New York, president of the International Federation, presided, and Miss Dorothy A. Heneker of Geneva, executive director, attended. Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman of Richmond, Va., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs of the United States, also took a prominent part as did Miss Dauphinee.

Not All Hollywood Romances Wrecked on Rock of Divorce

Canadian Press

Hollywood, Aug. 2.—You hear a lot about film stars' divorces, but what of the marriages that survive the years? Topping the list is George Arliss and Florence Montgomery, who have been hitting it off for the last thirty-four years.

Among the others who have been giving Cupid sterling support for a long time are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murray, twenty-seven years; James Gleason and Lucille Webster, twenty-six years; Will Rogers and Betty Blake, twenty-five years; Jan Hersholt and Vis Anderson, twenty years; George Bancroft and Octavia Brooke, twenty years; Eddie Cantor and Ida Tobias, nineteen years; Warner Baxter and Winifred Bryson, eighteen years; Clive Brook and Mildred Evelyn, thirteen years; Paul Muni and Bella Finkle, twelve years; Spencer Tracy and Louise Treadwell, eleven years; Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis, ten years, and Lionel Barrymore and Irene Fenwick, ten years.

A survey of approximately 300 wedwings of persons more or less in the movie limlight discloses that almost 75 per cent are still intact, and for those who are right where the kleig lights are brightest the ratio of success is still more than two to one.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Every parent visualizes the ideal child as fearless but not imprudent, self-reliant without being headstrong, obedient but not submissive, aggresive without being bold. Unhappily there is often one child in a family who realizes these ideals. This makes it utterly impossible for the other children to be different. They, too, must measure up to these standards because if one of their children can, why not the rest?

BE FAIR

Let children be themselves. Not all children in a family can represent identical temperaments, however pleasing taht might be to the parent. All children cannot be vivacious, entertaining, humorous and talented. Some quite naturally prefer placidity and enjoy humor, but cannot express it, appreciate talents without possessing them. There must be courageous as well as timid children, background as well as limelight children, quiet as well as boisterous children.

It is ridiculous for any parent to demand of one child the talents or temperament or individuality represented by another. Every parent agrees with this in theory, in practice she constantly endeavors to change the child's personality.

ARE YOU JUSTIFIED?

The mother of the two boys expresses that universal urge. She has an older boy who is studious, athletic, sociable and likable. The younger brother is exactly the opposite. He prefers reading to games. He is not popular with his companions and seems not to care. He dislikes sports, at which he is very poor, but makes good grades in school. The mother would like to make the younger brother an imitation of the older. How can she be helped to do this?

My counter query is: By what justification does she assume the responsibility of upsetting this younger brother's personality? She might make him a poor imitation of the older brother, an affected likeness, which would never be convincing or real. His own personality is built into the fibre of his being and is not to be twisted arbitrarily to some other pattern.

Give each boy equal opportunities. It is difficult for the mother not to discriminate in favor of her ideal child. But if she can say conscientiously that she has given each boy an equal opportunity to be himself, to express his own personality, each boy will grow into to happy, well-adjusted human being.

BRIDGE TOURNEY OPENS IN U.S.

Sir Derek Wernher and E. M. Goddard Win First Round

Asbury Park, N.J., Aug. 1 (Associated Press).—Sir Derek Wernher and Melvin Goddard won the first round of the special men's contract pairs event with the score of 175½ match points, in one of the curtain raisers of the seventh national bridge tournament, which started yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the American Bridge League.

The runners-up were: E. M. Westgate and F. F. Hoyt with 159½, and third place went to Capt. Fred G. French and S. M. Holmes Jr., with 149½.

Hal Sims and his partner made seven no trump doubled, but a diamond lead would have defeated the contract. Geoffrey Mottsmith playing with Dr. L. J. Vogel played the East and West hands at six spades and were set, while others of the twenty-four pairs entered played or defended it as four and five no trump or five and six diamonds.

The other afternoon event was the national women's pairs, which was won last year by Mrs. H. L. Peterson and Mrs. J. S. Jones Jr. of Philadelphia.

The first round of this year's championship was won by Mrs. Emery F. Clement and Mrs. M. S. Black of New York with 237½ match points.

JEWEL THIEF IS HUNTED BY POLICE

Atlantic City, N.J., Aug. 1.—Jewelry which its owner, Mrs. Philip Glemby of New York, valued at $100,000, and a cold youthful bandit who assertedly stole it at revolver point from Mrs. Glemby while she was preparing to retire at a local hotel were the objects of a widespread police search to-day.

Mrs. Glemby said the bandit, about twenty-two years old, pushed open the door of her suite early Sunday, commanded her to be silent and demanded the jewelry. She said he bound her with a towel, locked her in the bathroom and escaped with the loot.

Currant Jelly Refreshing Sweet

Currant jellies, red and black, are in every homemaker's cupboard. Sometimes the jelly is dark in color, sometimes tough, and often has lumpy sugar formation, or granulations in it. This last is due to over confidence, as currants are supposed to jell easily and some cooks feel that any recipe will make currant jelly. They chose a recipe, put currants and sugar together and because the syrup jells quickly, feel that the day's work is done. But the jelly is not a really good food, it is an expensive failure just because the most important point in making perfect jelly was overlooked.

Currants are rich in that jelly-making substance called pectin, but not all currants have nearly similar amounts of this.

To get correct proportion of sugar and pectin to make a perfect jelly, it is more economical to use the short boil method. This method not only gives a fine tender food with the flavor and color of fresh ripe fruit but gives almost twice as may jars as the other methods do. That is because fruit juice does not escape in the steady column of steam that rises while the syrup cooks for a long time in the old fashioned way.

Black or red currant jelly is quickly made at low cost from this pectin recipe: Five cups (2½ pounds) juice; 7 cups, 3 pounds) sugar, ½ cup of bottled fruit pectin.

With black currants, crush about four pounds fully ripe fruit, add three cups of water. With red currants, crush about four pounds fully ripe fruit; add one cup water. To prepare juice, bring mixture to a boil, cover and simmer ten minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard half a minute. Remove from fire, skim and pour quickly. Seal hot jelly at once with paraffin wax. This recipe makes eleven eight-ounce glasses.

AGED WOMAN DRIVES LONG WAY

Mrs. Rosa Ratcliffe, Eighty, Motors Alone to Seattle From Santa Barbara; Changes Own Tires

Times change and women with it. It is only a comparatively few years ago that a woman was considered old at forty and was expected to wear bonnets with perky little ostrich "tips" and strings tied under the chin—one way of telling the world that her youth was a thing of the past.

CAN CHANGE TIRES

But to-day the grandmother and the debutante share a common style in dress and—perhaps it is the psychological effect of the dress—the grandmothers vie with the debs in pep. One who seems to have discovered the secret of perpetual youth is Mrs. Rosa Ratcliffe, who is an octogenarian, yet thinks nothing of driving herself 300 miles a day in her motor alone, as the following story from Seattle reveals.

Alone in her small roadster, Mrs. Rosa Ratcliffe is hitting the highways these days. She is visiting this week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Mary Schwalen, 100 Olympic Pl., after a drive up the Coast from her own home at Santa Barbara.

Last summer she drove alone to Fergus Falls, Minn., and back again to California, all alone.

"I take my time and enjoy myself," she said.

"Tires? I change 'em myself. And I do it in a jiffy, too.

"I can do any little job of repairing on my car. Why not? Certainly I'm eighty years bid. Last April. What of it?"

She rarely tries to make more than 300 miles a day, she says. Often, if she likes the scenery, she just idles along.

From Seattle, she will drive to Spokane and then back to Santa Barbara by an inland route.

"I hardly ever travel the same road twice," she says. "There are so many things to see."

When she was born, in 1853, the idea of a "horseless carriage" was as weird as the idea of a space-ship for interpanetary voyages is to-day.

Yet Mrs. Ratcliffe thinks nothing of a solo automobile trip over the highways for thousands of miles.

"It's all in the changing point of view," she says. "People make a great fuss over my driving across country alone. As for myself, I don't see any news in it.

OBSERVES AMENITIES

"I am perfectly able to take care of myself. I know all I need to know about engines and tires and rules of the road. I don't have to ask anybody for help along the road."

She is a careful driver—fast enough not to stall any following traffic, slow enough to always have her car under control.

She is careful to give full courtesies of the road to other drivers.

"And I don't ask any special consideration because I'm a woman driver, either," she says, "or because I'm eighty years old.

"Why should I? What's wrong with being eighty?

"I enjoy it."

Girl Has Slept Eighteen Months

Chicago, Aug 1.—Medical science to-day began another effort to rouse twenty-eight-year-old Patrician Maguire from the sleep in which she has been for almost eighteen months.

Her physician began treatments which consist of typhoic inoculations to produce a fever, which, it is hoped, will "burn out" the infection of sleeping sickness which has kept the girl in a coma since February, 1932.

WIDOW BUILDS BIG BUSINESS

She Has Grossed $3,000,000 a Year With Her Atmospheric Tea-room Business

New York, Aug. 1.—Brown, bustling and beaming, Alice Foote MacDougall returned from Italy the other day and plunged feverishly back into her restaurant, coffee and giftie shoppe business — a series of amazing enterprises which grossed something like $3,000,000 annually until the disastrous year of 1932. Things looked pretty hopeless for a while, but now she says the goose again hangs high.

Mrs. MacDougall's success has been the inspiration for scores of women around New York—and no one can guess how many outside of it—to go into the atmospheric tea-room business. What most of them fail to realize in time, though, is that she has her own staff of architects and decorators who actually go to Spain when they want to reproduce an Alhambra room or a Seville wine shop. Nor do they know that Mrs. MacDougall has subsidized a whole villageful of pottery makers over in Italy to produce her tea sets and plates and such.

She used to be an anti-suffragist, and was forced into a career only by grim necessity. Her husband, a coffee jobber, died and left her with three children. She determined to carry on his business, though at first she had to borrow money to buy stamps and send out her sales letters. She prospered, however, and became rather well known as the only woman coffee dealer in town. Later she added tea and cocoa to the line. In 1922 she started a coffee shop in Grand Central station, then others, which were designed to look like quaint little courtyards in Italy. (The site for the one on Fifty-seventh Street was leased for twenty years for $1,000,000). After three of these, she started on Spanish types, also quaint.

There never has been anything atmospheric or whimsical about the food, however. It's pure American, though slightly garnished with dietetics. Her establishments are thronged by shoppers, bridge clubs and out-of-town visitors having lunch or tea. These patrons are always anxious for a glimpse of the marvelous Mrs. MacDougall, but seldom get it because she herself has neither lunch nor tea. Too busy working in her office.

BABY IS BORN OUT ON PRAIRIE

Regina, Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—It was a race between time and the stork—and the stork won.

While a cold fifty-mile-an-hour wind howled over the prairie, Mrs. Angus Karsawatum, Piapot Reserve Indian, gave birth to a baby boy on the prairie north of Regina this afternoon. The mother and baby are now in hospital where they are "doing nicely."

Mrs. Karsawatum was driving into the Regina exhibition with her parents, residents of the Qu'appelle Reserve, when she gave birth to the child. Her father called a doctor and while the woman's eight-year-old sister and her mother assisted, the baby was born on the prairie.

A blanket was all that cut off the cold wind from the mother and her tiny son.

BURGLAR TAKES STAR'S TROPHIES

Miss Betty Nuthall, the well-known British tennis star, was robbed of a large number of her lawn tennis prizes and medals by a burglar who entered the home of her parents at Richmond Hill, Surrey, recently while the family were at dinner.

She is particularly distressed by the loss of some small gold tennis balls presented to the winners of American championships. One of the balls was for the singles, two for mixed doubles, and one for the ladies' doubles.

Mrs. Stuart Nuthall, Betty's mother, explained to the police that her daughter had been playing the piano in the drawing-room before dinner. After the meal she returned to the drawing-room, but found the door locked on the inside.

Thinking it was a practical joke on the part of one of the family, she went round the house to the french windows and found them open. The burglars probably heard her and made their escape, leaving the room in disorder.

The stolen medals, about thirty-five altogether, included those won in the British hard-court singles at Bournemouth, the British hard-court ladies' doubles, the British hard-court mixed doubles, and a Wimbledon medal.

The thieves obviously were intent on taking mainly the objects in gold, although silver medals won by J. W. Nuthall, Miss Nuthall's brother, at Cambridge, also disappeared.

LINEN CHICK? CHECK!

Martha Sleeper

Hollywood.—Linen, if you note what the Hollywood stars are wearing, is by no means an "also ran." It's cool—it's chic—and you'll win easily if you wear it!

Simple to wash and press, linen is one of the most practical summer cotton fabrics. You can wear it on the beach, at smart dining and dancing places and on the street. The Hollywood stars do!

Martha Sleeper had a stunning black and white checked linen suit. The hiplength coat, with raglan sleeves, had a square neck with two button fastening. Her skirt was perfectly plain—no pleats, cut on slim lines with seams in front and back rather than on the sides.

Incidentily, having the seams in the front and back of your skirts, instead of on the sides, takes pounds off the appearance of your figure.

With her handsome linen ensemble, Martha wore white linen gauntlet gloves and a white linen hat.

Heather Angel, lunching at the Brown Derby with her mother and some friends, wore a periwinkle blue linen skirt and a swagger jacket. Heather's blouse was of navy blue handkerchief linen, polka-dotted in white.

The blouse tied at a medium high neckline with a huge bow under her chin. The outfit was topped by a periwinkle blue stitched linen hat.

Dorothy Jordan plays tennis in linen. On the court the other day she wore a blue and white striped linen sports dress with hat to match.

Working Wives

By ANNE GARDNER

"If you mean a pig, you may as well go ahead and say it," Jocko finished for her. For the first time since his meeting with Nan he was angry with her, consumed by the cold fury of those slow to anger.

All the weeks of his neglect came to mind. And now that his well meant attempt to make things nicer for Nan had merely called forth a tirade, his patience ended.

"You seem to forget that cleaning a house isn't exactly my business," he said with a quietness that deceived her.

"I suppose it's mine then," she flashed back. "It's all right for me to work all week like a dog, doing a man's work, and then spend the only day I have on my hands and knees scrubbing."

"You have never scrubbed in your life."

"I worked like a dog two weeks ago. I ruined my nails and wore myself out. But that's all right. That's the way it should be. I'm a woman; therefore I should make the living and do all the housework, too."

"Nan!" Jocko turned white. "That's one thing I won't stand for."

"Oh, no, you don't like to hear it, do you? It's all right for me to spend the money, so long as you don't have to know about it."

Jocko towered over Nan. "That is the most deliberately despicable lie any woman ever told and you know it is."

If Nan had not been tired and overwrought, this nightmare would never have gone on. But in her distraught condition, she was swept on into wilder and more unreasonable accusations.

"It costs all my salary to keep us going."

"That's because you spend too much," Jocko said. "We've lived like millionaires since we came to New York."

"I'm glad you realize that," Nan said viciously. "It's cost me enough to maintain you."

Jocko looked at her with eyes that burned into her. Nan had never dreamed that the gentle, adoring Jocko could ever look at her in that way. Then he took his hat and left the apartment.

CHAPTER XXV

At first, after Jocko left the apartment as the result of her tirade, Nan dissolved in a case of nerves. She cried, she paced up and down wringing her hands. The strain of the recent weeks, during which she had worked so hard, seemed to her a gigantic injustice, perpetrated on her by Jocko.

As the storm subsided, she felt much better. Nan was of the nervous temperament that occasionally explodes. The explosion acts as a safety valve, and the irritation is thus carried off.

She stopped crying, bathed her face, combed her hair, and began to feel quite cheerful. But she was ashamed of the way she had talked to Jocko. It was the first time since their marriage that she had used Jocko for her safety valve. In her love and tenderness for him, she had thought she had her temper completely under control.

Her first course of remorse was, therefore, that she lost her temper. It was so childish. The product of course, of weariness and strain. That would never happen again. It was too undignified. She owed it to herself to refrain from such outbursts.

She owed it to Jocko, as well. Now that she was her normal self once more, she began to see that Jocko had done his best to get the apartment in a condition that wouldn't worry her too much. Again her nerves had betrayed her by distorting things—an old trick they had.

Dear old Jocko! She had been amiss in not getting a maid to replace to one she had dismissed. There hadn't seemed a minute to do it. But she reflected now that she need only have called the employment agency on the phone. Almost anyone could have bridged the gap until she had more leisure.

As things began to take on their real colors again, she became more and more ashamed of the way she had treated Jocko. She determined to atone by having everything extra nice for him. She set to work to make the apartment livable once more, wishing all the time that he would hurry back so that she might rush into his arms and tell him how sorry she was for having acted like an ill-tempered little girl.

Nan, who got relief from her own outburst, and who had never before seen Jocko angry, did not realize that with him such anger meant the end. It crucified him, tore him to pieces. It was unendurable, and the situation which brought it on could be tolerated no longer.

The afternoon lengthened, and Jocko did not come back. Nan prepared a delicious dinner, getting her groceries at the delicatessen which is always just around the corner in New York, for their own larder was all but bare.

She kept it warm as long as she could. At last she put the food away untasted, and settling on the lounge with a book, tried to read. It was little use. At every step she started up, thinking it was Jocko. It never was. He had not returned at midnight, and she went to bed.

Next morning when she woke she put out her hand to touch him. The place beside her was empty. Jocko had not been home at all.

Now she was alarmed. Something must have happened to him. It did not occur to her for a minute that he could have stayed away on his own volition, so sure was she of his love, so ignorant of the strength of his pride.

She felt well enough to go to work, but remained at the apartment, thinking that word might come. When the morning wore on with no incident, she started out to make the round of the hospitals. Nothing there. So she came back, late in the afternoon, tired worried, heartsick.

As soon as she came in, she knew someone had been there. In another minute she saw what had happened. All Jocko's possessions were gone. On the table was a note in Jocko's handwriting, surprisingly small and neat for so large a man.

It told her briefly that he was moving his things to a rooming house, of which he gave the address. If she needed anything, she could reach him there. No other word, of accusation or explanation or tenderness. Jocko was through. He had left her.

Nan was thoroughly angry. She had been so ready to do anything in the world to make up for her ill humor. She had thought him injured, dead. And he had been perfectly well, just trying to punish her.

So this is what his love amounted to, that at the first storm, he had gone away. Nan thought of how she had loved him. Of the times she had been patient, when his awkwardness had cut her nerves like a knife. Of how she had not upbraided him because he was getting along slowly in New York, while she had done so well.

He could go. She was better off without him. His only value to her had been that he loved her. If he didn't love her, there certainly was no point in having him around sulking in corners.

The high indignation sustained her during the first week. Then it passed away, and she began to feel more repentant. Explosions, she realized, were not in Jocko's line. He was always calm and controlled. Her loss of temper, and saying deliberately hurtful things, must have seemed almost obscene to him. He couldn't realize how tortured and twisted her nerves became, how she suffered from them.

When he made overtures, she decided, she would accept them.

But the second week slipped into the third, and Jocko had made no overtures. She began to learn to respect him again, respect him as she had at the beginning of their love, when she had discovered how strong and fine he was.

She had come to feel that she might do anything to him and keep him. Now that she realized his pride, she admired him.

Now she was thinking of him constantly, remembering their love, wanting his love again. She felt wholly guilty for that miserable scene that had driven him away. It had been utterly without provocation. To be sure the reason had been her overwrought condition, but that was really no excuse for a grown-up woman.

Nan finally sent a message to him, a restrained little olive branch. Would he call her up?

He didn't.

That gave Nan the opportunity to do some more thinking. To put herself in Jocko's place throughout their months in New York. To see that it had been an enviable one, perhaps.

AN ESKIMO IN SIGHT

Mr. Weston and Roberta awakened at almost the same moment.

"Oh, Uncle Tim! Where is Allen?" asked the girl when she noticed the absence of her brother.

When Uncle Tim used his field glasses again, he was rewarded by the sight of the Eskimo changing his direction.

"Indeed, where is he?" replied the young scientist. "Perhaps he has just gone for a little walk. But look! Our water jug's missing, and there's a little water in the salmon can. I'll bet he's gone to the snowfield to replenish our water supply."

The minutes passed, and Allen did not return.

"I'm sorry he went alone," said Uncle Tim. "There's some hard climbing part of the way. Let's go after him."

Soon they started over the moss-covered ground, but before they had gone far, Roberta shouted, "Oh, I see him coming!"

Sure enough, Allen was on his way back, but with him he carried no trace of the water jug.

"I broke it!" the boy called out, as soon as he was within speaking distance, "I fell and I broke the jug."

"You fell!" exclaimed Uncle Tim. "Did you hurt yourself?"

"Yes, I hurt myself a little, but I'm just about all right now."

After Uncle Tim had assured himself that Allen's hurts were no worse than bruises, he said, "Never mind about the jug. We have a little water in the salmon can, and we'll use that for the present. The wind is blowing toward shore again, and maybe it will bring us a chunk of ice which we can melt in the can."

"Let's go and look now!" said Allen, anxious to make up for the loss of the water jug.

The three strolled to the shore, and looked about them. There was no trace of ice in the water, but in the distance Allen saw a small dark object.

"What's that?" he asked.

"Perhaps it's a seal," replied Uncle Tim. "But I'll get my field-glasses and see."

After studying the object, he said, "No it's not a seal! It's an Eskimo in a kayak! Let's shout to him!"

Together the three shouted with all their might, but the wind was against them, and there was no sign that the Eskimo had heard them.

"We'll build up the fire!" said Uncle Tim. "Maybe the smoke will bring him in."

With vim and vigor, they added fuel to the bonfire, and when Uncle Tim used his field-glasses again, he was rewarded by the sight of the Eskimo changing his direction—paddling toward shore in his strange sealskin boat.

Uncle Wiggily's Party Fun

(By HOWARD R. GARIS)

Uncle Wiggily, who was making sure he had enough ice cream for the cookie party he was giving in the woods for the animal children, heard Lulu Wibble wobble sadly quacking as she looked in her cookie bag.

"What's the matter, Lulu?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "What's happened?"

"Oh, something dreadful! Something terrible!" said the duck girl.

With her brother Alice and her sister Jimmie she was on her way—Eh? What's that? Something wrong? Oh, I see. I mean her sister Alice and her brother Jimmie—that's right.

Well, Lulu was on her way to Uncle Wiggily's cookie party in the woods, as I told you in the story last night. All of Mr. Longears Bunny children and all the other boy and girl animals of Woodland, near the Orange Ice Mountains, were also hurrying to this queer, jolly party. Then Lulu happened to look in the bag holding her cookie and she began to cry.

"Did one of the Bad Chaps take your party cookie out of the bag, Lulu?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, no, it isn't quite as bad as that," sobbed the duck girl.

"Did you lose your cookie?" asked Nurse Jane, who was going to help Uncle Wiggily at the party!"

Uncle Wiggily took one look at the cookie Lulu held up. There was a big hole in the middle.

"I didn't bite that hole!" quacked Jimmie.

"Neither did I," quacked Alice, his sister.

Uncle Wiggily laughed as he looked at Lulu's party cookie.

"This is my cookie!"

"No one bit the hole," said the rabbit gentleman. "It's all right, Lulu, my dear. Your cookie is just as good as any of the others."

"But how can it be good with a hole in the middle?" quacked Lulu.

"This is a new kind of cookie called a jumble," said Uncle Wiggily, twinkling his pink nose very fast. "Jumbles always are baked with holes in the middle. I suppose when your mother gave you this jumble cookie to bring to my party she didn't tell you about the hole in the middle."

"Oh, is there going to be ice cream?" quacked Lulu, flapping her wings.

"Lots of ice cream at my cookie party!" chuckled Mr. Longears.

"Then I don't care about the hole in my cookie," laughed Lulu. "I will eat all around the hole and that will be enough if I have ice cream."

"Hurray! Hurray! Ice cream!" shouted all the other animal children.

"And candy!" said Uncle Wiggily.

"Hurray!" cried the animal boys and girls again. Then Baby Bunty asked:

"What are we to do with the cookies we brought to your party, Uncle Wiggily?"

"You are to eat them with the ice cream," said the rabbit gentleman.

"Is that why you had us bring them?" asked Bunty. "Why I thought the cookies were to pay our way to your party."

No, just for you to eat, said Uncle Wiggily. "It was sort of a surprise for you and I hope you like it."

"Oh, we do!" said Nannie Wagtail, a goat girl who had brought a lemon cookie. Her brother had a cheese cookie in his bag.

"All ready, now, for the party fun!" called Uncle Wiggily. Then the animal boys and girls sat down on logs and stumps and soft, green, mossy places and began to nibble their cookies. Uncle Wiggily and Nurse Jane dished out the ice cream and passed around the candy and the party was just too lovely for anything when, there was a growling noise in the bushes and out popped a Black, Shaggy Bear!

"I'm coming to this party!" he roared.

"You can't come unless you have a cookie," said Baby Bunty.

"This my cookie!" roared the Bear, holding up his big left paw. But before he could scratch anybody with his claws the Bear gave a loud roar and ran away. For Uncle Wiggily threw in his face a lot of salty, freezing water from the can of ice cream and made that Bear shiver and shake. Then the cookie party went on and there was more fun than ever when Uncle Wiggily played Blind Man's Buff and fell in the water spring trying to catch Curly Twistytail. But Mr. Longears soon jumped out and laughed more than any one else.

And if the rubber ball will stop climbing up on the step ladder to jump off on the head of cabbage, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's hot weather fan and how he helped the grasshopper.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Custards are ideal desserts to serve with vegetable dinners. The main ingredients of every custard are eggs and milk, two excellent sources of protein. So when this factor has been lacking in the first part of the meal the dessert may well supply it.

A perfect custard is not difficult to make and is sure to be liked by every member of the family. Children who do not like to drink milk can be given it in this form. However, custards are among those simple things which must be perfect to be enjoyed, and precautions must be taken in their making.

AVOID LONG BAKING

The number of eggs used in proportion to the amount of milk determines the consistency of the custard. The eggs act as the thickening agent for the milk. Less than one egg to one cup of milk will not thicken the milk enough to make a firm custard. Individual custards do very well with this proportion, but large puddings that are to be unmolded will need more eggs. Soft custards, commonly called "boiled," and actually steamed, are made with one egg to one cup of milk. Large puddings should have at least six eggs to four cups of milk.

The amount of sugar used in custards is quite important, too. Too much sugar will liquify and settle to the bottom of cup or baking dish.

Always bake a custard in a large pan of hot water and never let the water boil. The custard is really "oven poached" rather than baked. A slow oven, or one which registers 350 degrees F. should be used. Do not bake it too long, either. An over-cooked custard is "weepy" and far from appetizing.

It's a good idea to scald the milk before combining it with the eggs and sugar. This insures a smooth texture and aids in preventing curdling.

BAKED CUSTARD

Six eggs, 3 cups milk, 2-3 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ⅛ teaspoon salt nutmeg.

Beat eggs slightly with salt and sugar.? Either granulated or light brown sugar can be used. Scald milk over hot water and slowly beat into egg mixture. Stir until sugar is thoroughly dissolved. Add vanilla and pour into a lightly buttered baking dish. Sprinkle top with nutmeg. Put baking dish in a large pan and at the edge of the pan pour in hot water until it is half-way up the sides of the baking dish. Bake in a slow oven until firm to the touch. When a silver knife is thrust into the custard and comes out clean the custard is done. Remove at once from the pan of hot water. Cool and unmold to serve.

The food value of the custard in calories may help you in planning meals. Protein, 252; fat, 534; carbohydrate, 704. Total calories, 1,490.

Force jelly through a potato ricer to make attractive riced jelly garnish. A spoonful of whipped cream adds a festive touch, too.

AIMEE'S HUBBY WRITES COMEDY

Hutton Wants Mae West to Star in His Brain Child Production

By DAN THOMAS

Hollywood, Aug. 1.—Things seen and heard around the film colony:

Adolph Zukor chatting with Claudette Colbert between scenes of the actress's new picture. . . . Joan Bennett lunching in the studio commissary with her father, Richard Bennett . . . both wearing make-up. . . . Groucho Marx entertaining his wife and daughter at the same place . . . and being serious for a change . . . maybe the daughter doesn't like his nonsensical cracks.

Dave Hutton, husband of Aimee Seple McPherson Hutton, has written a comedy which he hopes to persuade Mae West to do.

Cary Grant roaming around the studio with a blue sweater tied around his neck. . . . Charlie Ruggles arriving home by airplane . . . . after a grand vacation. . . . Fay Wray has an Airedale puppy that has an adsolute passion for cinnamon toast. . . . Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman arriving home with two big hams and ten pound of bacon . . . they had been playing the concessions at the beach.

Judith Allen at the fights with Bill Cagney and Lyle Talbot . . . . she's the girl who is considering divorce from Gus Sonnenberg, the wrestler. . . . . Jack LaRue and Jack Oakie also on hand to see the exhibition of that manly art.

Franchot Tone driving down the Boulevard in the paintless Ford he has had ever since arriving in Hollywood. . . . Dorothy Jordon and Merian Cooper receiving congratulations on their secret marriage which became known only recently.

That romance between Lois Moran and Douglas Montgomery seems to be flourishing . . . it's about time somebody captured the fair Lois . . . she's been dodging that wedding ring long enough. . . . Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard grabbing a midnight snack at the Brown Derby.

Si Bartlett and Boots Mallory heading toward the Cocoanut Grove again . . . getting to be a regular habit with them . . . if it keeps on they'll probably be married right there . . . with Abe Lyman and his boys furnishing the music . . . it won't be slow, either.

Katharine Hepburn and Josef von Sternburg as golfing partners. . . . Johnny Weissmuller and Lupe Velez dashing about the Colony Club . . . with Johnny's "ex," Bobbie Arnst, in the same place . . . and they couldn't see each other . . . or wouldn't anyway. . . . Jimmy Durante buying himself a whole flock of new suits . . . . which really is news.

Very nice children and you will find the cake good to dream on, but our coarse whole wheat bread (free from molasses, sugar or white flour) is full of pep and indurance, while our fresh English muffins, crumpets, tea cakes and brandy snaps cheer afternoon tea. # 500-Room Hotel—With Only Chickens As Guests

But They Demand—and Get—The Best of Service

The world's most palatial chicken-coop . . . Miami's 500-room White House Hotel.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 1.—"Please keep quiet, chickens upstairs," is the announcement which greets visitors to the huge, 500-room White House Hotel here—where all the guests are roosters and hens.

In this hotel, the hen takes the precedence; roosters are killed off when their days acclaim them as palatable fryer possibilities. The hen queens it over all, and becomes the recipient of all the courtesy and attention which a hotel man confers only upon a favored visitor.

Upon her arrival from the Baby Chick Room, where she was consigned when but a day old, her feathered highness is assigned to individual quarters, a room tidy, cheerful and attractive, although but seventeen inches square. There her days are spent in laying eggs, in cackling and singing as animated and continuous as that of any participant in a tea party which might have been held on the lawn, were the hostelry filled with tourist guests.

CHEF WATCHES DIET

If the newly arrived visitor does not take kindly to the food, or partake of a quantity sufficient to enable her to carry on her duties, the chef is quickly consulted about a special diet.

Should another feathered guest refuse to take part in the social activities of the hotel, which in this case may be an egg-laying contest, she is sure to receive the cold shoulder from the more congenial and amenable arrivals, and is eventually frozen out.

When a visitor complains about the drinking water, either as to quantity or quality, that is soon remedied, for the little bubble fountains which provide the drinks may have become clogged.

Everything is done by the management to make the guests feel comfortable and at home. There is a continuous supply of scientifically balanced mash feed ration, and similarly a constant supply of flowing fresh water. Lights are turned out at 9.30, for there is no reason why these feathered visitors should indulge in late hours. There is no place to go, and nothing to see, and since they must rise with the sun, and commence their daily tasks, the early bedtime was unanimously adopted. All a hen has to do is to eat, drink and sleep as much as she pleases—and lay eggs!

A HOTEL OF PAYING GUESTS

And some of them are mighty good at it, too. One sister has seventy-six eggs in fifty-two days to her credit, but the average fall into the 200 and 300 per year class.

When the constructive dream of M. R. Harrison of a 500-room tourist hotel in the metropolitan area came tumbling down during the depression, and which is now referred to as the "boom," Mr. Harrison was determined to put the huge caravansary to some more practical use than simply letting it rot and fall apart. Hence the Hen Hotel.

Maximum egg production at a minimum cost was to be the prime objective of the new enterprise. The individual cage battery system was adopted for handling the flocks, one of the latest innovations evolved in modern poultry husbandry. This system virtually reduces commercial egg production to a factory basis.

The chicks reach the hotel when a day old, the stock coming from the Mamaiade Hatchery, and consists of pullets hatched from eggs of pedigreed hens of the Beall-Tancred strain of White Leghorns, all having trapnest records. Within two weeks, the boxes containing 100 are thinned down to fifty chicks apiece, the thinning process continuing until gradually each hen acquires her own room, when her life's work begins.

ALL THE LATEST IMPROVEMENTS

The hotel, which was approximately fifty per cent. completed when the construction work was halted, Mr. Harrison points out, is ideally adapted to the development of this rather unusual enterprise, because of the perfect ventilation naturally afforded, and the minimum cost at which all sanitary necessities may be installed.

There is floor space adequate to accommodate 60,000 laying hens in cage batteries, besides room for rearing 20,000 fryers and 50,000 baby chicks for annually replenishing the laying flock, and for all packing and shipping facilities. He estimates that within the next two years he will have 10,000 laying hens (there are now 6,000); and that within seven years he will have the building filled to capacity—60,000 layers—which will at the same time furnish employment for from seventy-five to 100 persons.

CELEBRITIES BEGAN LOW

Rosa Ponselle Came From Vaudeville; Roxy Is Ex-Bartender

2,800 Churches of Every Sect, Including Buddhists and Moslems, in New York

BY PAUL HARRISON

New York, Aug. 1.—Most of Broadway's celebrities had amazingly inauspicious beginnings. John Golden, for instance, one of the most successful producers, once was a bricklayer—and even was a member of a construction gang on a theatre in which some of his plays later appeared. . . . And George Gershwin, who was born George Brushkin in Brooklyn, used to be a half-starved song plugger in Tin Pan Alley. His next job was in a vaudeville act in a cheap movie house, and he lasted exactly one performance. . . . .

It was only a few short years ago that Ethel Merman was flailing a typewriter in a realty office. And now she's starring in "Take a Chance," the musical hit that has moved to Chicago. Samuel Rothafel, now known as "Roxy," is an ex-bartender and a former marine. Rosa Ponselle vaulted from the vaudeville stage to the Metropolitan Opera Company. . . And Mae West was a vaudeville acrobat. . . . George S. Kaufman, after being fired from at least half the newspapers of New York and Washington, now has become the foremost director-playwright in the American theatre. . . .

Eddie Elkins, the orchestra leader, graduated from a dental college; Fred Waring took a degree in architecture, and George Kelly, the playwright, once was a civil engineer. . . . Constance Bennett used to be a rialto chorus girl . . . Arthur Hammerstein longed to be a prizefighter, and, as a sparring partner, was clouted around by most of the topnotchers of that day.

RELIGIOUS NEW YORK

Little notes on the big town: It has more than 200 theatres and movie houses, with about a third of them dark at present; 200 night clubs, most of which are losing money; 400 public dance halls specializing in the sucker trade, and more speakeasies (often estimated at over 30,000) than the mere fifty-seven federal enforcement men can shake a stick at. . . . New York is more religious, though, than you'd think, for it has 2,800 churches of every sect and denomination, including Buddhist and Mohammedan, and they have a total membership of well over a million. . . . .

More than a third of the people here are foreign-born, and it's difficult to find a native New Yorker. It has more Italians than Rome, more Irish than Dublin, more Germans than Bremen and more Indians than Tishomingo, Okla. It contains one-tenth of all the Jews in the world, and there are exactly 11,314 Cohen in the Brooklyn telephone directory alone. . . . . New York is a centre of higher education; as a matter of fact, one of its college campuses is on the forty-second floor of the Woolworth building. . . .

The town dotes on its 140 public monuments and statues, which if laid end to end, would probably look more astonishing than they do at present. . . Real estate here is worth $8,500,000,000, which does not mean that taxes are collected on any such amount. . . . A new business starts up approximately every fourteen minutes, and another goes broke almost as often. . . . Every fifty-two seconds a passenger train pulls in to discharge part of the 200,000 visitors that arrive every day, at least half of whom know more about New York than do New Yorkers. . . .

The traffic problems keeps everybody on the jump, although the time spent by pedestrians waiting to cross Fifth Avenue at Forty-second Street totals 100,000 days a year. . . . Somebody is born every eight minutes, and there is a wedding every fourteen minutes. Each hour and fifteen minutes, though, somebody applies for a divorce or hops off for Reno.

HOLLYWOOD PERSONALS

HELEN CHANDLER became an actress because she accompanied a girl friend who was trying out for a role. Helen got the part instead of the friend.

Joan Bennett studied interior decorating in France for several years before finally listening to her father's pleas and turning actress.

Because they grew so fast, four different litters of sucking pigs had to be used in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing."

June Knight's first boy friend looked so much like Neil Hamilton that she used to carry a picture of Neil around with her all the time. Now she's working with Neil in her first picture.

Alison Skipworth made her debut on the stage as a singer.

MARIE DRESSLER'S childhood ambition was to be a woman chariot driver in a circus.

Maureen O'Sullivan's hobby is raising poultry.

Beatrice Lillie (Lady Peel in private life) always drinks a cup of tea before arising in the morning.

NEWS MEN MAKE ACTRESS BLUSH

German Star of "Maedchen in Uniform" Annoyed at Press Photographers

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

New York, Aug. 1.—At last there has come to New York a movie queen who would not pose with her knees showing.

Dorothea Wieck, German star of "Maedchen in Uniform" en route to Hollywood, was attending a tea given in her honor at the Waldorf Astoria when two newspaper photographers approached her.

Dorothea Wieck

"Won't you please cross your legs and pull your skirts up a little," they asked, as she sat down.

"Please?" she queried, not understanding English any too well.

They repeated their request.

Two fiery red spots flamed in Miss Wieck's pale cheeks as she rose to her full height.

"No," she said. "Absolutely, no! I am a tragedienne, a lady. I am not a comedy star, nor am I a dancer. I cannot understand your country. I arrive here for serious work and everybody who wants to take my picture says: 'Oops with your skirts!'"

It took her manager full ten minutes, in soothing German, to quiet her. Somebody else shooed away the surprised photographers.

GRAND DUCHESS BUSY

The Grand Duches Marie turns her spare time into useful occupations. She knits original-looking hats for herself and her friends. Lucrezia Bori is another good knitter. The Metropolitan Opera star knits most of her own good-looking sweater blouses.

GEOGRAPHICAL MENUS

Sheila Hibben, widow of Paxton Hibben, herself a famous cook and compiler of those noted regional dishes that went in to her "National Cookbook," was called from New York to Washington by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for consultation on a series of White House menus. Included in the menu list that Mrs. Roosevelt will use is at least one dish from practically every culinary region in the United States.

Mrs. Roosevelt introduced northern newspaper women to Hopping John, that famous southern dish of lady peas and rice, the other day at the White House. At that lunch the First Lady launched her new plan to serve old-fashioned dishes that are famous in some region of the country.

Louisiana visitors may be served gumbo Z'herbes, the soup that pleased Andrew Jackson's palate so much that it took him back to New Orleans for another bowl. Other visitors may enjoy strawberry blanc mange, Thomas Jefferson's favorite dessert, or a crab soup that Martha Washington delighted to make.

DENTAL DRAMA

One of Eugene O'Neill's wisdom teeth, mounted in gold and enclosed in a little glass case, is the prize decoration of Nat Leif, playwright-dentist.

Eugene O'Neill

On the walls of his office are autographed pictures and humorous testimonials from Alexander Woollcott, Heywood Broun, several of the Marx Brothers and innumerable other celebrities. Leif does nearly all of his celebrity dental work in the evening and on Sundays, usually with an audience of other celebrities. His favorite story is about the time he pulled one of Heywood Broun's teeth in the midst of a violent argument on poker. The conversation was so absorbing that he forgot all about the anesthetic. What is more, so did Broun.

DOMINION THEATRE

Heralded as being the most lavish musical picture since the advent of talking pictures, Paramount's "College Humor" has its local premiere at the Dominion Theatre to-day.

EMPIRE THEATRE

Outstanding athletes in Hollywood's film colony are not confined to the screen's "he-men." One of the outstanding athletes is Frank Borzage, director of Mary Pickford's "Secrets," at the Empire Theatre, who has won championships in handball, squash, golf and other sports.

He is also a licensed flier, pilots his own plane. Yachting is another of his diversions. He owns a racing hydroplane and a cabin cruiser. An expert horseman, he was one of Hollywood's best polo players until studio and physicians' requests caused him to give up the sport after his mount fell on him in a game.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Building a "crash-track" on which to stage street car accidents and auto collisions was a unique engineering feat that went into the making of thrills, romance and comedy in Lee Tracy's latest screen appearance, "The Nuisance," now at the Capitol Theatre.

The "crash-track" was constructed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios with controls and checks that enabled experts to time collisions perfectly. Thus thrilling accidents were made possible for the new drama of a novel legal racket. There are half a dozen such accidents in the picture, in which Tracy plays a shyster lawyer who makes his living by filing suits for injuries to clients.

PLAYHOUSE THEATRE

The question of whether a poor man and a nobody can marry a beauty of wealth and social standing and keep his indentity is told in a satire called "Platinum Blonde," produced by Columbia, directed by Frank Capra and featuring Loretta Young, Robert Williams and Jean Harlow at the Playhouse Theatre to-day.

"Platinum Blonde," a comedy drama told in a light and whimsical vein, shows how a freedom-loving young reporter falls under the spell of a spoiled heiress who sees in him soft material to bend to her will.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

The smartest and latest Hollywood fashion will be seen gracing the lovely figure of Adrienne Ames who appears in Paramount's "A Bedtime Story," starring Maurice Chevalier, now at the Columbia Theatre. Miss Ames wears an afternoon frock of black taffeta with enormous puffed sleeves which are massed with rows of parallel cording. A flat taffeta hat, white doeskin gloves, a black crepe handbag and patent leather pumps complete the ensemble.

Tuberculosis Deaths Fewer As Disease Is Understood

Scourge Yields to Attack of Prevention, Diagnosis and Treatment—Isolation Helpful

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

In the control of tuberculosis there are three places for attack—prevention, diagnosis and treatment.

It is recognized that satisfactory treatment depends on early diagnosis. It is recognized, furthermore, that the combination of early diagnosis with treatment definitely lowers the death rate from this disease.

Finally, the prevention of tuberculosis, through the control of the dissemination of the organism, represents the greatest advance in the control of this disease.

If young children can be kept from contact with the disease, if children whose constitutions are such to incline them toward infection when submitted to the germ are given opportunity to develop good bodies, and thereby resistance, much will be done to stamp out this ancient Captain of the Men of Death.

It is now some 50 years since Koch announced the discovery of the germ that causes tuberculosis. Since that time physicians, health officers, social workers, and educators have combined in pointing out to the public the necessity for avoiding contact with this germ.

The only way in which contact can be avoided is to remove children as early as possible from parents who are tuberculous. It is also necessary to avoid overcrowding in homes, apartments and institutions.

Whereas much is now known about the nature of the germ that causes tuberculosis, the other factor in relationship to the disease, namely, the reason why the cells and tissues of one individual succumb to the toxin and the infection, has not yet been determined.

Death rates for tuberculosis have fallen fairly steadily during the last 30 years. Most of this fall is definitely related to improvement in living conditions, to changes in hours of work, to emphasis on the value of sunlight and fresh air and good personal hygiene.

Much of the control of the death rate is related to proper disposal of sputum of those who are infected, much of it, no doubt, due to the withdrawal of infected people by placing them in sanatoriums, preventoriums and similar institutions.

Nevertheless, there is a vast amount of tuberculosis among people generally. The battle continues, and it is reasonable to believe that some day this disease, like yellow fever, will be brought under complete scientific medical control.

LIFE TERMER IS PARDONED

Associated Press

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 1.—Bill Green, life-term murderer, who slashed the throat of Leo Frank, central figure in one of the most sensational cases in Georgia criminal history, is free. Governor Talmadge yesterday pardoned the aged and ill convict after he had spent twenty years of his life at the state prison farm at Milledgeville.

Green cut Frank's throat a few days after the latter had arrived at the farm from Atlanta and only the timely work of a physician saved Frank's life.

Frank was convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Mary Fagan, Atlanta stationery plant employee. His sentence was commuted by John M. Slaton, then governor.

About six weeks after Green's attack and before the wound had completely healed, a mob stormed the prison, removed Frank, took him to Marietta, near Atlanta, and lynched him.

For his deed, Green spent seven years in solitary confinement.

Victoria Tennis Stars Score Easy Victories in National Tourney at Vancouver

Mary Campbell Victor Over Californian; Marcel Rainville Extended to Advance

Canadian Press

Vancouver Lawn Tennis Club, Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Canada's first ranking tennis player, Marcel Rainville, Montreal, was extended to the limit in the Canadian championships here this morning by a long-limbed San Francisco youth, Bill Lichtenberger. Another easterner, George Leclerc, Ottawa, fell before the hard-hit ground strokes of the eighth-seeded Charlie Hunt, San Francisco, in straight sets.

Lichtenberger gave an exhibition of sterling net play to take the first set from Rainville at 6-2. The Canadian Davis Cup player put on the pressure in the second set with the score at four all, and broke through Lichtenberger's service to take two straight games and even the match. In the deciding set with the court at three all in games and Lichtenberger leading 40-30, the California served a terrific ball close to Rainville's service line and Marcel refused to call it in or out. The point was replayed, but the steam seemed to be missing from Lightenberger's shots and he lost the game and the next two to drop the match.

MURIO WINS EASILY

LeClerc attempted to match Hunt's steady baseline play in his match with the San Francisco stylist, but was not steady enough and won only three games in the two sets, as Hunt took the match 6-2, 6-1. Hunt was semi-finalist in the British Columbia clay courts tourney and runner-up to John Murio, San Francisco, in the grass courts event at Victoria last week. Murio reached the fourth round today with a decisive win over the Arizona player, Merle Moore, Tucson, 6-2, 6-1.

Two Victoria players advanced with Bud Hocking defeating Harry Goldman, San Francisco, 6-2, 6-4, and Don Campbell beating Doug Cameron, Vancouver, 7-5, 6-0. Neither were extended to win.

Lloyd Budge, Oakland, Cal., gave the fourth-seeded Mel Dranga, Seattle, a bad scare when he played smashing tennis to win the first set at 6-1, but Dranga rallied with the count at three all in the deciding set to win nine of the next ten games, and the last two sets, 6-3, 6-1.

WOMEN'S PLAY

The top-seeded woman player, Gracyn Wheeler, San Francisco, raced through two sets with Helen Goodman, Vancouver, to win, 6-0, 6-2.

Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monico, scored an impressive victory over Vess O'Shea, Vancouver, 7-5, 6-2. The Canadian girl led 5-2 in the first set, but Dorothy took five straight games and was never in trouble in the second set.

Caroline Deacon, Vancouver city champion, paired with Dunc Williams, Victoria, to record a mixed doubles triumph over Mr. and Mrs. Bob Laird, Los Angeles. The Canadians pulled out a hard-fought first set at 11-9, but dropped the second 6-4. The final set also went 6-4 in the two-hour struggle.

Walter Martin, the favored Toronto and Regina player, coasted to an easy victory over a Portland junior, Jim Johnston, 6-1, 6-3.

Mary Campbell, Victoria, British Columbia champion, seeded second in the women's singles, defeated Guisse Raegener, sexteen-year-old San Francisco girl, 6-3, 6-0

SEAWALL TOE IS REPAIRED

Damage Done in Big Storm Mended; Wooden Balustrade Planned

Repairs to the toe of the Ross Bay Seawall, damaged in the big storm last winter, are gradually nearing completion, G. M. Irwin, acting city engineer, stated this morning.

More than 900 feet of the wall has needed replacement at the foot, the engineer explained. It has been buttressed with twelve-inch timbers sunk to a depth of five or six feet in order to protect the wall from further erosion in high seas. Inside the wooden form concrete has been poured to level off with the broken section.

A start will be made soon on the balustrade which was battered by the seas for practically its entire length when waves fifty and sixty feet high swept across the wall into Ross Bay Cemetery, completely blocking the road. It is planned to put up a timber railing, which will be in the form of temporary repairs rather than a permanent structure.

Relief labor is being used for the job and the total cost for materials was allowed at $5,000 by the City Council.

GOLDFISH HIGH IN SOCIAL SCALE

That Is Until Summer Literally Bowls Them Over For Vacation Season

New York, Aug. 1.—For people who are going away for the summer, pet goldfish usually turn into white elephants. Of course, costly tropicals can be, and usually are, boarded by some of the snootier pet shops; but fish of the common golden variety just aren't worth the trouble and expense.

This is no problem, though, for fish owners who have heard about the big pool in the lobby of Loew's Lexington Theatre. About ten years ago a man wandered in with a bowl under his arm and asked the manager if he might leave his pets there for the summer. Others heard about it and by now the parking service is utilized to the extent that the theatre is considering installing another tank or two.

About thirty times this month, according to Assistant Manager Miller, big cars have driven under the marque and chauffeurs have alighted with small aquariums to be ceremoniously emptied into the lobby pool. Nobody ever succeeds in reclaiming his fish in the autumn, since most of them look alike. Two turtles have been deposited there this year. And the other day a young lady came in with a small, damp package which was additionally sprinkled with tears. After a few soft endearments she released an outraged baby alligator.

. . . And all from the very best families, too!

HE GIVES THEM BACK

A more exclusive boarding place is maintained by Mr. James Hannon, the caretaker of Gramercy Park. Since this fenced rectangle may be used only by residents of the hotel, clubs and apartment buildings that surround it, Hannon will care for no one else's goldfish. He also endeavors to return them to the rightful owners.

Between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and Fourth and Third avenues, the park is almost the only section of Little Old New York that has remained unchanged as the city reared and spread. Hannon also is rather old and changeless, having taken his job in 1902. By this time he has earned the gratitude of hundreds of parents, for he has guarded and disciplined thousands of children who have romped there through the years.

For misbehavior such as throwing gravel or picking flowers, Hannon hands out sentences such as walking ten times around the park, or sitting quietly on a bench for half an hour.

MISCHIEFISH

Getting back to goldfish and their epidemic among practical jokers of giving bulky bowls of them as bon voyage gifts. Of course no traveler knows what to do with them in a crowded stateroom, and the continuous sloshing is uncomfortable suggestive of wild waves and seasickness . . . Also there's the story about the broker who recently returned from an unsuccessful deep-sea fishing trip to find his bachelor apartment full of goldfish. They were swimming in his bathtub, in the basin, the kitchen sink, his vase. There were little two-for-a-nickel goldfish occupying his highball glasses, and even a few in the inverted glass shade of his chandelier. Badly shaken, he decided to mix a drink and think things over. But thought better of it when he found a goldfish in each of the ice trays of his refrigerator.

ACCLAIM GIVEN STRING GROUP

Rehearsal Under George J. Dyke to Raise Funds For Vancouver Trip Enjoyed

That the object of the special recital given yesterday evening in the New Thought Hall to assist in the expenses of a string orchestra from the city going to compete at the music festival connected with the Vancouver Exhibition, has local support was seen in the attendance, and in the encouraging reception given the seventeen young players as they appeared with their conductor, George J. Dyke, upon the platform.

The orchestra's part of the programme was to demonstrate what they have already accomplished in rehearsals, and judged accordingly, it proved an unusual display of an already careful preparation of work for public performance, and the audience, when asked to allot marks, a la festival, was unanimous—many marks reaching over ninety out of a possible 100—as to the success in the forthcoming competition.

Besides the orchestra some of Mr. Dyke's pupils rendered a programme of violin music, consisting of six ensemble past festival pieces extending over a period of six year's successes; some violin solos by Fay Ockenden, Ellen Brayshaw, Grace Koyama and Leslie Jordan, a duet by the latter and Fay Ockenden, the second movement of Bach's Double Concerto for two violins (accompanied by Helen Ockenden), which proved a delightful exposition of violin ensemble playing, and the trio by Ellen Brayshaw, Fay Ockenden and Grace Koyama, played in spirited fashion.

AUDIENCE'S CRITICISM

Mrs. Hebden Gillespie, when asked by Mr. Dyke to offer any suggestion as to the work of the orchestra, said she thought more marks could be obtained if the young players would more closely watch their conductor, "Who she felt sure would lead them to greater victory and bring credit to the city. An interesting feature connected with the demonstration by the orchestra was that it became a private rehearsal in the presence of an audience who evidenly enjoyed the experiment.

Miss Helen Ockenden, who admirably acted as accompanist throughout, in addition played a pianoforte solo with style and technical equipment, the colossal Etude No. 3, by Liszt. Her listeners loudly demanding an extra, the gifted young pianiste reponded with the impetuous "Malaguena," from the Spanish composer's suite, "Andalusia" (Lecuona).

The programme was as follows:

(a) "Largo" ..... Halden
(b) "March Rondo" ..... Pritsche
(a) "Prayer and Rondo" .....

(b) "Intermezzo" ..... Tolhurst

SUSTAINS BURNS IN PLANT MISHAP

D. McMillan, 996 McCaskill Street, Taken to Hospital With Painful Injuries

D. McMillan, 996 McCaskill Street, an employee of the Sidney Roofing & Paper Company, was taken to the Jubilee Hospital this afternoon suffering from painful burns sustained when his clothing caught fire in the paint room at the plant.

The extent of his injuries was not determined early this afternoon.

Fred Casey, 160 Blanshard Street, suffered minor burns to the face and hands at the same time but first aid treatment at the plant relieved him.

The fire department was called out to the fire which followed a small explosion in the asphalt tank, but was not of serious dimensions.

McMillan fled from the room with his clothing ablaze, and after the flames were extinguished he was taken to the hospital by employees of the firm

MARKETING OF WHEAT DEBATED

Canadian Press

Regina, Aug. 1. — Canada's huge wheat carry-over is part of the wheat reserve essential for world markets. The time has come to forget the causes and cost of this carry-over and to recognize it for what it has become.

Delegates to the World Grain Conference to-day were so told by H. L. Griffin of the United Grain Growers Limited, Winnipeg, in the course of a consideration of merchandising methods in wheat marketing and what improvements, if any, can be effected.

The world market, Mr. Griffin submitted, can and does tolerate substantial reserves and would be highly intolerant of any other condition.

Hunger and fear of hunger were too recent experiences to the greater part of mankind and were too widely spread even at the present day to make world markets anything but uneasy without there being constantly ahead a supply of food sufficient for many months. Consequently, Mr. Griffin argued, western elevator systems carried out a function of world economic importance. He told the delegates world wheat reserves, once scattered on farms over the wheat-producing countries, now were largely concentrated in Canadian elevators.

CIVIL SERVANTS TO BE RETIRED

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Pursuant to the government's efforts to reduce the annual cost of the public service by an amount estimated in the budget speech last March to reach $14,000,000, the Cabinet yesterday passed an order providing for retirement of civil servants who have reached or may reach the age of sixty-five years.

This is only one of the methods being adopted by the government in its economy efforts, and the number of employees concerned is estimated at about 1,500 throughout Canada. Those retired will receive their superannuation allowances as provided under statute.

RALPH YOUNG, VANCOUVER, DIES

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Ralph Young, aged forty-four, of 3036 West Fourteenth Avenue, well-known city newspaperman, died to-day in the Vancouver General Hospital after a long illness.

Mr. Young had suffered from abdominal troubles and had undergone several operations. He entered the hospital some three months ago for a major operation and put up a plucky fight, but his strength slowly ebbed and for some time he was unconscious.

Born in Ohio, N.S., he had a varied newspaper experience and for more than twenty years had been employed on the staffs of Vancouver newspapers. He was sports editor of the old World and The Star and was well-known in sport circles.

His cheerfulness under his physical disability won admiration. He was a battler. His illness little affected his cheerful temperament and right to the last he believed he would win his fight.

Not long ago in a letter to a colleague on The Daily Province he wrote: "While I realize I shall never enjoy robust health again, the old horse will find the road again and carry the mail once more, God willing."

Mr. Young attended Acadia University, Wolfville, N.S., and graduated in 1912. Shortly afterwards he came west.

He was a member of British Columbia Institute of Journalists.

He is survived by a widow and two children, Fred, aged sixteen, and Florence, aged twelve.

Tennis Stars Get Down To Serious Play In Canadian Meet

THE SPORTS MIRROR

Davis Cup Finally Leaves Hands of Frenchmen

British Players Rise to Greatest Heights of Careers

Horses Have Treated Form Players Rough This Year

FRANCE HAS lost the Davis Cup. After six years of domination in international tennis the Frenchmen were Sunday forced to give up the ghost to a brilliant British squad of racquet wielders led by those two world-famous stars Frederick J. Perry and H. W. "Bunny" Austin. Emulating the Frenchmen the two Britons lose to greater heights than at any time during their careers in the Davis Cup competition. Neither of them was able to gain the final of the men's singles at Wimbledon but they play in the Davis Cup Series verged on the sensational. Against the United States in the interzone final the British accomplished a complete rout of the Americans, winning the round four matches to the one. They continued their great performance against the Frenchmen.

Thus ends a French rule in Davis Cup tennis of six years. When the series got under way this year the United States team led by the dashing Ellsworth Vines, was looked upon as France's greatest threat, but it was the British who turned the trick. By their defeat the French lost an opportunity to equal the record of seven straight Davis Cup victories established by the United States from 1920 to 1926, inclusive.

In setting this mark the Americans defeated Australia four times, Japan once and France once. France's six triumphs were all scored at the expense of the United States. During the six years the brunt of play for France fell upon the shoulders of four great players, Rene LaCoste, Henri Cochet, Jacques Brugnon and Jean Borotra.

* * *

International tennis this year has also produced a new men's world singles champion in the person of Jack Crawford, Australia. Long one of the leading tennis players in the world, Crawford has come into his own. He started his rise to the top with a great win over Henri Cochet in the final of the French hard courts championship, taking the title out of France for the first time in history. He followed this by his great victory at Wimbledon. If Australia should bring on another first class singles player or a good doubles combination, to team with Crawford, that country should make a strong bid next year for the Davis Cup.

Horses during this year of upsets and form reversals have certainly dealt the form players plenty of body blows. The three-year-olds have been the worst offenders, but plenty of the older horses—and younger ones, too—have been indulging in anti-form pranks.

Take a list of the great three-year-old stakes in the United States as a beginner. Cutting out some of the smaller ones you have left: The Kentucky Derby, Preakness, Belmont Stakes, Dwyer, Withers, American Derby, Latonia Derby and Arlington Classic.

Not one of the so-called top horses was able to win one of these races. Broker's Tip won the Derby, Head Play the Preakness (Broker's Tip last). Mr. Khayyam made a monkey out of Head Play in the American Derby and then ran last in an allowance race. War Glory ran away from his field in the Dwyer and then lost his next two starts. The Belmont was won by an erstwhile claiming horse named Hurryoff. The Darb won the Withers and Inlander the Classic.

Now here's what makes the form player feel as though he'd been in the corner of either Mr. Schmeling or Mr. Sharkey. If Head Play could win the Preakness with the greatest exhibition since Man o' War, how is it he is now unable to beat one horse in a twelve-horse field?

And if War Glory could run away from his field in the mile and a half Dwyer Stakes, setting all the pace, and turning on more power in the stretch, how is it he got tired after the first mile in his next race?

Well, and for that matter, what made Mr. Khayyam suddenly decline the issue in two races and run last in another, after setting a track record in the Chesapeake Stakes, and giving Head Play two sound beatings?

And there are the older horses. Plucky Play still is breaking the hearts of the form players. Maybe you remember that during the last two years he limited his victories to races in which he whipped Gallant Knight, Sun Beau, Equipoise and Faireno? Well, this year in his first start he beat a good field, carrying top weight of 124 pounds, and being a long shot, too.

But in his next out, dropping nearly twenty pounds, and facing poorer competition, he was next to last—"still running," as they say. And then take the case of Indian Runner, a bang-up two-year-old. As a three-year-old a common plater, as a four-year-old, next to Equipoise, the outstanding horse of the year.

Favorites Win In First Round With One-sided Results

Marcel Rainville and Walter Martin Top Seeded Men in Straight Set Wins

All Victorians Returned Victors

John Murio, Holder of Two B.C. Crowns, Winner; Good Matches Promised To-day

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Fast and smashing tennis was promised at this club to-day as surviving contenders in the fortieth renewal of the Canadian championship tournament faced stern opposition in both men's and women's singles. First and second round play yesterday eliminated the "weak sisters" of the national classic, while favorites advanced en masse.

One of the most interesting matches in to-day's card appeared on the opening draw, with the hard-hitting Ottawa boy, George LeClare drawn against Charlie Hunt, San Francisco. The stylish Hunt was semi-finalist in the British Columbia clay courts singles here two weeks ago, and runner-up to John Murio in the B.C. grass courts event at Victoria last week.

Murio, the San Francisco Hawaiian, faced a "dark horse" on this same draw in Merle Moore of Tucson, Arizona; Mel Dranga, Seattle, was drawn against Lloyd Budge, Oakland, a leading California player. Two Victoria men appeared on this draw with the champion Don Campbell pitted against Doug Cameron, Vancouver, and Ross Hocking, conqueror of Dranga last week, playing the San Francisco junior, Harry Goldman. Marcel Rainville, top-seeded Montreal player, was expected to gain the fourth round at the expense of lanky Bill Lichtenberger, San Francisco.

RYALL PLAYS WILLIAMS

The favored Walter Martin, Regina and Montreal, was drawn against a Portland youngster, Jimmy Johnston. Canada's sixth ranking man, Ossie Ryall, Vancouver, opposed Dunc Williams, Victoria, and Alf Bence, Saskatoon, faced Martin Kenneally, San Francisco. Laird Watt, Montreal, was drawn against the Canadian junior champion, Colin Milne, Vancouver.

Feature match of the women's singles to-day was expected to be that between Mrs. R. B. Wilson, Victoria, and the Vancouver junior, Eleanor Young.

The top-seeded player, Gracyn Wheeler, San Francisco, was drawn against Helen Goodman, Vancouver, and Mary Campbell, Victoria, recent winner of the British Columbia title, opposed Gussie Raegener, San Francisco.

UPSET SEEN

A slight upset occurred in the men's doubles yesterday when the Saskatoon pair, Bert Arscott and Alf Bence, were defeated by the Butt brothers, of Vancouver, 7-5, 6-4.

The top-seeded men's doubles teams scored impressive second-round victories after receiving byes in the first round. The veteran Dr. Jack Wright, of Vancouver and Montreal, star of many Davis Cup battles, paired with Walter Martin to defeat the Vancouver team of Smith and Clarke with the loss of only one game in each set.

Another Davis Cup player, Marcel Rainville, paired with his fellow Montrealer, Laird Watt, to trounce the strong Vancouver players, Gordon Shields and Tom Berto, 6-1, 6-3.

George LeClerc, Ottawa, and Ossie Ryall, Vancouver, formed a new team to defeat McLuckie and Gaetz, Vancouver, 6-2, 6-3.

RESULTS

Results follow:

MEN'S SINGLES
First Round

Harry Goldman, San Francisco, beat Gordon Horn, Winnipeg, 6-0, 6-0.

Bob Pommer, San Francisco, beat G. T. Godfrey, Vancouver, 6-3, 6-4.

Shorts Scarce At Vancouver

Vancouver, Aug. 1.—Three youthful Winnipeg tennis players are the only male competitors in the Canadian championship tournament here this week wearing shorts. Gordon Horn, Cuthbert Hopper and Marshall Smith all appeared on the grass courts yesterday attired a la Bunny Austin.

Three women net stars also support the cool freedom of the shorts. They are Irene Church, Seattle; Jean Milne, Vancouver, and Mrs. Bob Laird, Los Angeles.

UPSETS SEEN IN NET PLAY

Robert Ryan and Dick Murphy Provide Surprises in Southampton Tournament

Southampton, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Robert Ryan, Chattanooga, and Dick Murphy, Utica, N.Y., furnished the Meadow Club's forty-third invitation tennis tournament with a brace of upsets yesterday.

Bryan outlasted the veteran South Orange, N.J., player, J. Gilbert Hall, after a three-hour battle, 9-7, 6-8, 6-4, while Murphy, a student at a Hamilton, N.Y., College, put out Dr. Eugene McCauliff, Yonkers, 6-3, 8-6.

Gregory Mangin eliminated Grady C. Frank, a member of the invading Oxford-Cambridge team, 6-1, 6-2.

Three other members of the Oxford-Cambridge squad, Douglas G. Freshwater, Brian K. Burnett and William F. Moss, were eliminated but Peter S. Young and James Nuthall advanced into the second round.

A HARD MATCH

Freshwater gave the Texan, John McDiarmid, a terrific battle before bowing 5-7, 16-14, 6-2, but Moss lost to Karl Kamrath, Austin, Texas, 8-6, 6-3, and Burnett went down before Wilmer Hines, Charlotte, N.C., 7-5, 6-2.

Young eliminated Norcross Tilney, East Orange, N.J., 9-7, 6-2, and Nuthall put out Dr. William A. Rosenbaum, New York, 6-3, 6-2.

BURLEIGH GRIMES SIGNED BY CARDS

St. Louis, Aug. 1.—Burleigh Grimes, whose brilliant pitching was largely responsible for St. Louis Cardinals winning the world series in 1931, will again join the Redbirds, Branch Rickey, vice-president of the club, announced yesterday evening.

The last of the National League spitball flingers, released unconditionally by Chicago Cubs Sunday, signed a Cardinal contract yesterday.

McCready Winner Over Mike Romano

Montreal, Aug. 1.—Substituted on a wrestling programme at the last minute in place of Henri Deciane, former world champion, Earl McCready yesterday evening won a hard-fought match from Mike Romano. The Saskatchewan grappler took two falls, while the Italian obtained one. The Canadian obtained both his falls with the flying scissors.

King Levinsky Will Marry Blues Singer

Chicago, Aug. 1.—King Levinsky, the fighter, has been matched for matrimony, his sister-manager, Lena, said yesterday.

Though Lena's in favor of it, she said she hoped his marriage to Frances Faye would not take place until he gets another match out of the way September 8. The latter is with Jack Sharkey.

"I don't want King eloping until he beats up this Sharkey fellow," was the way Lena phrased it, but she said Frances was "one nice girl."

Peden And Parrott In Marathon Lead

Tied With Twenty-six Other Riders For First Place in Bicycle Marathon

Fifty-four Competitors Face Starter's Gun; Peden and Two Others Pile Up

St. Gabriel de Brandon, Que., Aug. 1.—With twenty-six riders all tied for first place, the field of fifty-four in the transcontinental bicycle race to-day arrived in St. Gabriel de Brandon from Montreal, where the 4,300-mile grind started yesterday evening.

Joe Alporte, Montreal, led the field into this little Laurentian village, sixty-nine miles from Montreal, with Torchy Peden, giant Victoria, B.C., redhead, second; Pierre Gachon, Montreal, third, and Polly Parrott, Victoria, fourth.

But Alporte lost valuable ground in the thirty-mile run at the Montreal baseball stadium yesterday evening. Peden, Gachon and Parrott, however, are among the twenty-six riders tied for first place.

When Promoter Armand Vincent fired the starting gun at the Baseball Stadium here, fifty-four riders started pedaling. First they made 150 laps around the ball park, a distance of thirty miles, and then set out for St. Gabriel de Brandon, sixty-nine miles away, and the end of the first lap.

PEDEN IN SPILL

Spectators got their first thrill at the end of the thirteenth mile, when Peden sprawled headlong at a treacherous corner. Two other riders fell on top of him but all were able to go on after a short delay.

Roads were wet and slippery and the night was pitch dark for the ride to St. Gabriel de Brandon. The racers were given as much assistance as possible from the light of accompanying automobiles.

As the riders swept out of the Stadium, Harry Horan, Newark, N.J., was leading the pack.

BRITISH WIN IS APPLAUDED IN NEW YORK

Victory of English Davis Cup Tennis Players Receives Tribute From United States Newspaper; British Wrecked Entire Cup Programme

New York, Aug. 1.—Under the heading "The Cup Crosses the Channel," The New York Herald Tribune to-day commented as follows on Great Britain's Davis Cup triumph:

"The pleasure of applauding a job neatly done goes with congratulations to England's Davis Cup team, which has restored to Great Britain the trophy she had last won in 1912.

"How that British team did alter the programme! Ruthlessly wrecked it, one might say, if it were not for the entirely good-humored almost care-free mowing down of the opposition. Three times they won when the other side looked stronger. They disposed in succession of Australia, America and France as cooly as you please. The young Englishmen, Fred Perry and Bunny Austin, knew exactly what they were about and enjoyed doing it."

BETTY NUTHALL WINS HONORS

British Stars Defeats Alice Marble in Tennis Final at Easthampton

Easthampton, N.Y., Aug. 1.—Betty Nuthall, the British Wightman Cup star, captured the singles championship of the eighth annual Maidstone invitation tennis tournament yesterday, defeating Alice Marble, rising young Sacramento, Cal., player, 5-7, 6-3, 6-0, in the final round.

England also shared in the doubles as Margaret Scriven, another British Wightman Cup player, teamed up with Elizabeth Ryan to defeat Miss Marble and Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, 6-2, 9-7.

Miss Marble, seeded first among the American players in singles, fought a courageous battle against Miss Nuthall, but it was her third match on one of the hottest days of the year and she faded quickly after she had smashed through to win the first set. She offered stubborn resistance in the second set, but fell into frequent errors in the third, and lost it at love.

Miss Ryan and Miss Scriven made up a doubles combination much too strong for Miss Marble and a surprisingly erratic Mrs. Moody. The latter won only half of her six service games, double-faulting the final point of the first game of the first set and missing several net shots when points were badly needed. Score were 6-2, 7-5

More Discussion On Leg-theory Bowling

London, Aug. 1.—At a meeting of the Imperial Cricket Conference, lasting an hour, at Lords, yesterday, it was unofficially learned the question of body-line bowling was discussed. The M.C.C. afterwards sent a cable to Australia stating the views of the county captains were being sought.

The result of the meeting is to be issued later. It is known, however, united action on the controversial leg-theory bowling, which roused such a storm during the English tour of Australia last winter, is being sought, and it is believed nearly all English county captains are in favor of banning it.

Slingers Turn In Fine Performance To Whip Camerons

Play First Class Ball Behind Noble's Steady Pitching For 3 to 1 Victory

SLINGERS TAKE SECOND POSITION

Noble Limits League Leaders to Three Hits; Bennison and Cummins Hit Well

Turning in their finest performance of the season behind the three-hit pitching of Jack Noble, Slingers handed the league-leading Camerons a 3 to 1 defeat in the Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Athletic Park yesterday evening. Slingers had a big night and their victory boosted them into second place a few percentage points up on the Tillicums. The Sons of Canada are in the cellar. The Tillicums will have a chance to regain the runner-up berth to-morrow night when they hook up with Camerons.

Noble allowed three scattered hits and although he only struck out two he was given first class support by his teammates. Only two errors were chalked up against Slingers, Stickney and Constable being responsible. Noble walked three. Big Dan Lidstone opposed Noble and was found for eight hits, while he fanned six. He failed to get as good support as his opponent, five errors being scored against Camerons.

Taking the game all around, it was an interesting exhibition and a good crowd of spectators went away well satisfied.

TWO-RUN LEAD

Slingers opened up a lead in the first inning when they drove in a pair of markers. Bennison connected for a line drive over shortstop that was good for three bases. Scotty Robinson singled to right field, scoring Bennison, and when Blunt allowed the ball to go through him Robinson went right around the bases. Stickney grounded to Lidstone and Worthington and Cummins both struck out.

In the second inning Slingers got a man around to third but Noble retired the side by taking three healthy swings. In the last of the second Purmall went into catch for Slingers, replacing Worthington. The former has been laid up with a damaged finger.

Camerons got to Noble for their lone run in the third. After Smith had grounded to Williams, Holness hit late over first base for a triple. Lidstone was safe when Stickney dropped his high fly to right field, Holness scoring. Ashikawa walked. Nex grounded to Noble and Belcher duplicated to Constable to end the inning.

FINAL SCORING

Slingers' third and the final run of the game came in the seventh. Noble opened the inning by striking out. Bennison showed his speed in beating

McLARNIN MAKES PLANS TO GO EAST; RECEIVES OFFER

Welterweight Champ Ready to Consider Prospects With No Sign of Return Bout With Young Corbett; Offered $30,000 For Fight With Andy Callahan

Buckley said the bout, if McLarnin accepts, would head a Boston newspaper's Christmas basket fund.

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.—"Pop" Foster, manager of Jimmy McLarnin, world welterweight boxing champion, said yesterday that unless the Olympic Auditorium here provides McLarnin with a return match soon with Young Corbett, Fresno, the champion will begin to consider eastern offers for a title fight.

At the time he made the statement, Foster had not been reached for comment on the news from Boston that Johnny Buckley had offered McLarnin a $30,000 guarantee to defend his title against Andy Callahan, Lawrence, at Boston in September, and neither Foster nor McLarnin could be reached later.

Foster said Tom Gallery, Olympic matchmaker, had promised a return fight with Corbett shortly after the recent title match at Wrigley Field here, but that so far, Gallery and Larry White, Corbett's manager, have done nothing about it.

"Unless they get busy, we are going east," Foster said.

He denied a report that McLarnin had been signed to meet Corbett at San Francisco on Labor Day.

Prince Albert And Toronto Scottish In Canadian Final

Eliminate Calgary C.P.R. and Montreal C.N.R. in Canadian Soccer Semi-finals

Three-game Final Starts Thursday

Lone Goal Gives Prince Albert Win Over Calgary; Scottish Victors 4 to 1

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—A ninth-hour victory behind them in the race for western Canada soccer honors, Prince Albert Reds to-day began a brief period of careful and intensive training for the Dominion Football Association finals against Toronto Scottish, starting here Thursday night. The second game will be played Saturday and a third, if necessary, Monday.

Just as it seemed Calgary C.P.R.'s relentless battering of the northerners' defence lines must find an opening, Prince Albert went one goal up as the veteran Byers slugged a cross from Makepeace into the net corner. They turned on enough defence steam to hold the Albertans scoreless and take the third game of the semi-finals before 3,000 fans at Carruthers Park here yesterday evening.

On their road to the Canadian title tilt the Saskatchewan players have twice snatched triumph from the clutches of defeat. After winning the first game against Winnipeg Irish in the quarter-finals, they were extended to a third game by the Manitoba tehm. Calgary C.P.R. took the first game of the western finals, 4 to 3, but the Reds came back last Saturday with a 2 to 1 victory that sent them tied into yesterday evening's match.

The game was distinguished by Calgary's extraordinary command of passing combinations and a rejuvenated defence line they organized by a complete rearrangement of the line-up they fielded in the first two games of the series

CALGARY DOMINATES

Time and again the Albertans came within a hair's breadth of slipping the ball past Milne as play milled furiously around the Saskatchewan posts but the break always failed to come and Prince Albert's tally in the heat of the excitement seemed to have caught them at the cracking point. The Reds called out reserves of energy when they saw victory in sight and played better football than they had been displaying at any time in the first seventy-five minutes of the struggle.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—Canny mixture of youth with experience makes up the Toronto Scottish soccer club, en route to-day to Winnipeg to defend the Dominion football Association trophy they won from New Westminster last year. They won the right to enter the final with a 4 to 1 victory over Montreal C.N.R. yesterday in the deciding game of the eastern final three-game series after tying the first two.

Between the goal posts twenty-six-year-old Hugh Wallace, agile Scotsman who once performed with Bradford City in England, will be ably protected by the seasoned Jimmy Noke and Davie Weir. Noke joined Scottish many years ago and his defence partner was with Glasgow Rangers and Greenock Morton of the Scottish League before coming to Canada.

Johnny Graham has a pair of half-back partners—Harry Phillips and Jimmie Patterson—who came up from Parkview Juniors to Toronto to join Scottish this season.

Plenty of punch is packed in the front rank usually piloted by tricky Andy Stevens. The former New Bedford centre learned his soccer in England.

Outside right has been played by Billy Somers but Somers was unable to make the trip to Winnipeg. His place will be taken by Angus MacDonald, young brother of the veteran Hector MacDonald. Hector will partner his youthful brother on the right wing.

Norman Donald and Bill McManus have proved a successful left-wing combination.

Sharkey to Take On King Levinsky

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Jack Sharkey will return to the ring for the first time since losing the world heavyweight championship to Primo Carnera, against King Levinsky, Chicago slugger, here September 6, if one difficulty can be removed.

out a ground ball to McKenzie. He went to second when Belcher juggled Lidstone's throw in an attempt to catch the man off the bag. Robinson was safe on McKenzie's boot, Bennison to third. Stickney lined to McKenzie, who threw to first to catch Robinson and make a double play, but the first baseman lost the ball in the sun, Bennison scoring and Robinson reaching second. It was a tough break. Purmall lined to McKenzie.

Ruth Leads Yanks To Decisive Win Over Washington

Smashes Triple, Two Doubles and a Single in 13 to 9 Victory Over Leaders

SENATORS NOW LONE GAME UP

St. Louis Browns Make Manager Hornsby's Home Debut Success With Victory

Washington Senators and New York Yankees have wound up their crucial four-game series with honors even and the Senators clinging desperately to a one-game lead.

Beaten back in their first two attempts to storm the Senators' ramparts, the Yankees made it two in a row over the leaders yesterday as Babe Ruth led an eighteen-hit asault that gave the world champions a 13 to 9 victory.

Walter Stewart, Senator southpaw, was hit hard and finally retired in a seven-run rally in the fourth inning.

Ruth's smashing triple off the centre field wall in that inning brought more runs. The Babe, who also collected two doubles and a single during the afternoon, later scored the seventh run of the inning on a fielder's choice. Vernon Gomez, slender southpaw, held the Senators in submission after the first inning.

ST. LOUIS WINS

In the only other major league game of the day, St. Louis Browns made Manager Rogers Hornsby's home debut a success as they beat the Cleveland Indians, 12 to 8, in a wild game that developed into a marathon contest in the seventh inning.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Washington, Aug. 1.—The champion Yankees collected eighteen assorted hits off three Washington pitchers and trimmed the league-leading Senators 13 to 9, yesterday, to get an even break in their four-game series and head back to New York just a game out of first place.

Babe Ruth's still formidable bat played an important part in the old-fashioned Yankee offensive that reached its climax in a seven-run barrage in the fourth, as Sunday, Washington errors contributed to the home team's downfall.

On the first ball pitched by Burke, Ruth lofted a three-bagger to deep centre, which drove in three more runs. The Babe scored later, when Gehrig was thrown out.

Besides his triple, Ruth rapped out two doubles before retiring from the burning heat after seven innings. A ladies' day crowd of 15,000 was present.

FRED PERRY IS LIONIZED

Hero of British Davis Cup Team's Victory Gets Rousing Welcome Home

Police Powerless to Control Monster Crowd; Other Team Members Ignored

London, Aug. 1.—Amid a wild turmoil of cheering thousands, England's triumphant Davis Cup champions returned from France yesterday evening, where they had downed the French to bring back the great international trophy to the British Isles for the first time since 1912.

The huge crowd that had waited for hours at Victoria Station to get a glimpse of the tennis idols were unable to restrain themselves when the new champions came into view. Police lines were brushed aside as the throng, with a mighty roar, swept into the station, shouting "We want Perry."

Frederick J. Perry, whose dramatic singles victory over young Andre Merlin, Sunday, clinched the cup for Great Britain, was seized by six husky admirers, hoisted to their shoulders and swept out of the station and along the street, through the hysterical thousands.

OTHERS IGNORED

H. W. "Bunny" Austin, who conquered Merlin on the first day of competition, but lost to Henri Cochet in the third singles match, Harold Lee and George Patrick Hughes, the doubles combination, that lost to Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, were almost completely ignored by the most excitable crowd old London Town has known in years.

A number of the crowd fainted in the crush and the giant, good-natured bobbies had difficulty in extricating them from under the feet of the well-wishers. The police were powerless to control the young huskies who had seized Perry, until the mighty singles artist had been paraded up and down while the spectators cheered.

Perry was then taken and placed on a waiting automobile and driven slowly through the crowd with six policemen perched on the running board to guard him from those who were too enthusiastic in their welcoming tactics.

While the crowd was concentrating its attention on Perry, the other members of the team slipped quietly away

Smashing Price Gains In Wheat In Wild Buying

Canadian Press

Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Late-session announcement that about 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been sold for export brought an influx of buying into the Winnipeg Grain Exchange to-day and added more than two cents to smashing price gains scored in the early trading. At the close values were 9 to 9⅛ cents above the previous finish.

A wild movement to buy wheat near the close featured the session and under the added support early gains of about 7 cents were quickly added to. At the close October delivery sold for 89 cents, December for 90¾ and May for 94¾ cents.

Despite the sharp advance, volume of trade was not large. Offerings were light. After a sharp advance to top levels the market became featureless. Strength was based chiefly on weather and crop conditions which were extremely bullish.

Pegging of prices in the Chicago market at last night's closing levels was also a bullish factor.

Export business announced late in the session showed a decided renewal of interest by foreign buyers.

Liverpool quotations near the close were 1¼d. to 1⅜d. higher, providing bullish encouragement.

Cash grains were firm. Flax featured coarse grains with a topmost gain of 15 cents. Other coarse grains also advanced.

Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Drastic reversal of grain market behavior took place today, and all speculative pits were filled with orders to buy instead of to sell.

Except for a brief period early, however, when prices rose buoyantly to the topmost point possible under new emergency rules, an artificial deadlock prevailed and trading was almost at a standstill.

Wheat closed strong at the day's top level, five cents over yesterday's finish

Futures close:

Wheat: Sept. 97⅛, Dec. 1.00¾, May 1.04⅞.

LOAN TO SEND U.S. DOLLAR UP

N.Y. Herald-Tribune Says Canadian Loan Will Raise Dollar Against Sterling

Canadian Press

New York, Aug. 1.—Commenting today on the £15,000,000 Canadian loan being opened on the London market Wednesday, The New York Heard-Tribune says:

"The flotation of the Canadian loan in England is expected to have important repercussions on the American dollar, driving it higher. Most of the Canadian debt is in terms of New York funds, and in order to service the debt Canada has been doing her borrowing in New York. By borrowing dollars Canada has not affected the foreign exchange rate on the dollar.

"Now with Canada borrowing in London she will, in order to service her dollar debt, presumably purchase dollars with all or much of the proceeds of the sterling loan. Such purchasing of dollars by Canada will have the effect of raising the rate on the dollar against sterling, which is very much desired in England."

Canadian Press

London, Aug. 1. — The Financial Times to-day states it finds it hard to believe Canada's adherence to the "sterling bloc last week was entirely unconnected with this week's announcement that Canada is floating a £15,000,000 loan in London."

"Canada," says the paper, "has not been the most eager of the Dominions to open her market to British exporters. If the present loan contributes to a more favorable attitude towards British goods in Canada it will be well worth while."

Manchester, Eng., July 1. — Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, said The Manchester Guardian to-day, commenting on the new Canadian loan, "will be able to return to Canada with much more composure than if he had nothing to report except adjournment of the wheat conversations, and an implied undertaking by the Canadian government to maintain the Canadan dollar at about its present rate against the pound sterling, even in case of further depreciation of the United States dollar."

The latter is The Guardian's view of the empire currency declaration of last week, which did not specifically mention pegging of currencies, but declared for stabilization of exchanges. At present the pound is around $4.81 in Canada, slightly below nominal par

BOTTOM LIMIT SET AT CHICAGO

Grain Exchange at Chicago Says Prices Must Not Go Below Yesterday's Close

Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Seeking to stem the downward trend in grain prices, directors of the Chicago Board of Trade after a protracted meeting yesterday evening announced:

"There shall be no future trading in grain and provisions below the closing prices on grain and provisions Monday, July 31, 1933." The ruling is effective until August 15.

The upward maximum fluctuations of five cents for wheat, barley and rye; four cents for corn, and three cents for oats, are not affected by the order.

The order curbing downward currents in prices will remain in effect at least until the closes of trading August 15 and if any change is to be made then three days' notice will be given members of the board, the announcement said.

The closing wheat prices on the Chicago Exchange yesterday were as follows:

Wheat—September 92-1; May 99-7; December 95-6.

Among the principal gainers were International Telephone 4½s and Illinois Central Railroad 4¾s in which advances were two and three points respectfully.

United States governments had a comparatively dull day, though prices were firm. British Government 5½s recovered a fair part of an early three-point loss.

Heart-Hungry Husband Explains Why Middle-Aged Men Philander—Shall Boy of Eighteen Marry or Take Chance of Losing Sweetheart?

DEAR MISS DIX—People often ask why middle-aged men, who have apparently been devoted husbands, suddenly take to philandering. It is because they are so heart hungry. Now I am married to a fine woman. She is attractive, a good housekeeper, a good cook and a good mother, but in the twenty years we have lived together not three times has she expressed any affection for me or showed in any way that she was particularly interested in me. We never quarrel, yet sometimes when we are sitting together I feel that I am the lonesomest man in the world, and that I would give everything I have if she would only give me a kiss and tell me that she feels glad that she married me. I have never gone philandering, but I am beginning to see how it could be done, and it may be that in a little while when the craving for love gets unbearable I may decide to go where some one will tell me the things I want to hear. J. S. J.

Answer—I commend this letter to the prayerful consideration of those women whose husbands have roamed away from their own firesides and who can't understand why a man isn't satisfied with a wife who keeps his house clean and neat and his socks darned and feeds him upon pies such as his mother never knew how to bake.

They are so self-righteous, these neglected wives, when they recite the litany of their virtues. They have literally slaved for their husbands. They have pinched every penny to save his money. They have scrubbed and washed and ironed to keep their husbands comfortable. No man better taken care of, no children better reared than theirs. What more could any man ask of a woman than they have given? And why their husbands should tire of them and go off after strange goddesses, they cannot imagine.

And they do not know that they have given their husbands everything except the thing that they want most of all, and that is some outward expression of the love that their wives really feel for them, and that takes itself out in work and worry instead of words. Walking ten blocks to find a cut-rate butcher shop or spending hours stewing over a gas range preparing a dainty dish is, in reality, a declaration of affection that is worth more than any amount of palaver, only a man is too dumb to understand it.

It always seems to me that one of the greatest mistakes that women make is in assuming that heart-hunger is an exclusively feminine complaint. Men suffer from it just as much as women do. The only difference is that women howl to Heaven over their gnawing pains, while men only too often assuage theirs by nibbling at forbidden fruit.

It is a strange thing that women, who know the value that they put upon little attentions and caresses and tenderness from their husbands, so seldom seem to realize that their husbands have the same desire to be jollied and made much of by them. Every wife knows that as long as her husband tells her that she is the one woman in the world to him and that he thanks God every day on his bended knees for getting her for a wife, she is perfectly happy and satisfied, no matter if she has to do her own work and wear hand-me-downs and ride in the street cars instead of having a Rolls Royce and Paris finery and servants to wait upon her.

But it doesn't dawn on her that she can keep her husband from looking at other women and feeling that he is a martyr who has been sold by marriage into slavery to a wife and children by her constantly assuring him that he is the handsomest and most fascinating man in the world to her, and that she thinks no hero has anything on him in the brave way he meets life.

If we knew the inside history of the men who, at middle age, suddenly jump the domestic bars, we should find that most of them do it because they are starved for love. They hunger for flattery. They yearn to be cajoled and petted and made much of, and because they don't get it at home they go abroad in search of it.

One of the things that women marvel over is the devotion they so often see a man give a woman who is what they consider a poor wife. Very often she is the most thriftless woman they know. She doesn't sweep under the beds. She is a poor cook. She wastes money. And yet her husband adores her, and they don't know that while she may not adequately nourish her husband's body on a balanced diet, she feeds his soul, and that while she may throw away his money she makes him rich in her love and appreciation.

So, wives, I commend this man's letter to you. Take his tip about telling your husbands the things they want to hear if you want to keep them from going to other women to hear it. Make your home-brew soft talk so strong that other ladies will seem insipid and tasteless compared to it.

DOROTHY DIX.

• • • •

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a boy of eighteen, very much in love with a girl of nineteen. My father is sending me to college and is planning on putting me through a dental school when I finish. My girl says it will ruin my life for her to marry me now and that my family would always blame her for marrying me at this time. I run around a great deal, and being young, she is afraid that I will continue to do so after marriage. I think I could stop this. I am positive that she is the one for me and I fear that if I have to wait for three years something will come between us. Shall I marry her and let my father support us until I get through school or shall I take a chance on losing her by waiting three years? Talk to me as if I were your son. DOC.

Answer—If you were my son, I would say this to you: A young man married is a young man marred, particularly when the young man is of your temperament.

No boy in the world at eighteen is fit to marry. He hasn't come to himself. He hasn't the faintest idea of what sort of man he is going to develop into nor what sort of woman he is going to want for a wife when he is grown up, and not once in a hundred times does a very youthful marriage turn out successfully.

In your particular case the odds against it would be even greater, for the reason that you "run around," as you say, is because you are susceptible to women as a sex. Every petticoat has its allure for you. Your taste is constantly changing, and you are in love with love instead of having concentrated your affections on some one particular woman.

This is perfectly natural. It is, indeed, a phase of adolescence, but do not wreck your life by taking it seriously and entering into a marriage that you would regret before the ink was dry on your marriage certificate.

It isn't fair to yourself and it isn't fair to the girl, and she has more intelligence than you have by not being willing to enter into it.

As for the danger of losing her by waiting until you are ready to marry, that is as nothing to the danger of wishing that you hadn't married her if you do marry her. If you really love each other, your love will stand the strain of a three years' wait. If it does not, you may be sure that it was just a passing fancy that would have gone the way of all puppy love, anyway, and you will be saved the mess of a divorce and from having committed the crime of bringing a child into the world to suffer for your mistakes.

Certainly you have no right to marry and dump a wife down on your father to support. That is as unmanly an act as any lad can commit. You have no moral right to marry until you are ready to assume the obligations that matrimony entails and provide for your own family.

DOROTHY DIX.

Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1933

Astrologers read this as an uncertain day in planetary direction, but certain benefic influences are active.

The morning hours should be devoted strictly to routine matters, because adverse influences may be strongly felt.

This is a day propitious for mental effort of many sorts. Members of the learned professions should benefit at this time.

While this configuration continues the impulse to apply scientific methods to business and government affairs may be compelling and should bring about good results.

Reorganization of offices and shops is indicated as likely to be widespread within the next few weeks, when waste of every kind will be avoided.

Efficiency and economy are to remain as watchwords long after prosperity returns fully to this country, which is to be henceforth noted for its thrift and its conservation of natural resources.

Again there may be agitation regarding the marketing of agricultural products, but again the seers predict profits for the season.

As harvesting progresses this year there will be increase in the sentiment of approval for co-operation in crop-raising and selling.

Builders and contractors should find much encouragement as the summer draws to a close this year, for there is to be an increased demand for homes, it is forecast.

Resorts in many places may experience losses and decreased patronage this month, owing to extraordinary weather conditions.

Fairs and expositions should make the most of favorable days and should push advertising, it is counseled.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of fair success. Business may cause journeys for a few.

Children born on this day probably will be quick-witted and resourceful. Subjects of this sign usually are fond of study and able to make much of their knowledge.

Francis Marion Crawford, noted author, was born on this day, 1854. Another who celebrated it as a birthday was Elisha Gray, 1835, inventor.

Many Ships Here During July

Nearly 1,000,000 Tons of Shipping In During Month

Eleven Freighters in Port and Lifted 6,650,000 Feet of Island Lumber

Port Has Busiest Month in Years

Ships Land 3,782 Tons of General Cargo From Many World Ports

Shipping at the port of Victoria continues on the upward trend and during the month of July a large number of deep-sea passenger liners and tramp freighters docked at the outer wharves with heavy cargo consignments for discharge and to load shipments of Vancouver Island lumber for the Orient and the United Kingdom. July was the busiest month in several years as far as lumber shipments went. Eleven freighters docked for lumber and moved a total of 6,650,000 feet out. All was loaded at the Ogden Point piers.

According to figures released by the Victoria office of the Canadian Customs Department this morning, 435 ships were cleared inbound and outbound from and to foreign ports. The total registry of these ships amounted to 889,617 tons.

Much cargo was handled here during the month. A total of 3,782 tons was discharged here, and 13,687 tons, including the lumber, were shipped out to ports all over the world. Much transhipment of cargo was carried out during the month. Ships arriving from across the Pacific left silk and silver here for liners going down to San Francisco and through the Panama Canal to New York. Cargo from Havana and California ports was left here and shipped out to the Orient aboard the Empress and President liners.

Ships in for lumber during July and the amounts they loaded and their destinations follow: Iwatesan Maru, Japan, 900,000 feet; Tantalus, Shanghai, 500,000 feet; City of Vancouver, Shanghai, 350,000 feet; Geddington Court, 350,000 feet; Cape Horn, United Kingdom, 800,000 feet; Leikanger, United Kingdom, 300,000 feet; Taranger, United Kingdom, 450,000 feet; City of Victoria, Shanghai, 450,000 feet; Nordfarer, United Kingdom, 1,000,000 feet; Masunda, United Kingdom, 850,000 feet, and Akibasan Maru, 700,000 feet.

Other Vancouver Island lumber ports also report much activity during July. Port Alberni has been so busy during the last few days that the Ss. Akibasan Maru, inbound from sea, had to come here yesterday instead of going to Port Alberni first. That port was unable to look after her. The Japanese freighter Gyokoh Maru is expected here to-morrow to move 600,000 feet of lumber for Australia and towards the end of the week the Golden Rod is expected and will also take a lumber cargo for Australia.

The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the tables, the tide rises or falls continuously during three of the usual tidal periods.

The height is in feet and tenths of a foot, measured from the average level of low water.

WILL RETIRE

Commodore Walter Hose, Chief of the Canadian Naval Staff may retire shortly, says a recent report from Ottawa. This picture was taken just a few days ago in the federal capital. The report says he will probably be succeeded by Capt. P. W. Nelles, formerly commander-in-charge of the Esquimalt Naval Barracks.

DUE IN MORNING WITH VALUABLE CARGO

SS. EMPRESS OF CANADA

which will reach the William Head quarantine station to-morrow morning at 6 o'clock, from ports in the Philippine Islands, China, Japan and Hawaii. She will dock at Rithet piers about 9.30 o'clock and remain two hours before proceeding to Vancouver. For Victoria the liner has a good number of passengers, 500 bags of United States mail and 140 tons of general cargo, including raw silk and silver bullion for transhipment at this port to San Francisco and New York.

LONDON ONLY SEVEN DAYS FROM CALCUTTA

London, Aug. 1.—A vital link in the chain of empire air lines which, it is planned, will ultimately provide regular air communications to all parts of the empire, was forged during the first week in July, when the London-Karachi air route was extended across India to Jodhpur, Delhi, Allahabad and Calcutta.

It was the aim of Imperial Airways, when that company was instituted just over nine years ago, to utilize the experience gained on its European airlines in the establishment, link by link, of a series of long-distance air-mail routes stretching across the empire.

In 1927, in pursuance of this policy, the first empire air-mail of 1,100 miles was established between Cairo and Basra. Then in 1929, came the institution of the through service of 5,000 miles from England to India. In 1931 the company was able to open the first sections of its air-mail between England and Africa, and by 1932 the complete through route was in operation from London to Capetown.

Now, to-day, an arduous period of preliminary work is bearing fruit in the extension of the Indian air-mail on towards Australia.

The departure of the India service from the London airport on July 1, witnessed the inauguration of a 1,500 miles trans-empire air extension, which Imperial Airways are operating in conjunction with Indian transcontinental airways and which will carry the route on across India to Calcutta, bringing that city within seven days of London by air, as compared with sixteen days by surface transport.

After its arival at Karachi, this service continued on an inaugural flight along the new trans-Indian route, and arrived at Jodhpur on July 7. At 5 a.m. on the following morning, the air-mail departed from Jodhpur for Delhi, alighting there at 7.30 a.m., after which Cawnpore was reached at 10.30 a.m., and Allahabad at 11.45 a.m., the air-mail arriving at Calcutta on the completion of its first flight across India on July 8.

The cost of a flight between Calcutta and Karachi in English pounds is $150. From Calcutta to Jodhpur the fare is $115.

Another section of this main airline through to Australia, that from Calcutta to Rangoon, should be ready for operation in October. A further link, from Rangoon to Singapore will, it is hoped, be opened for traffic by or before the new year. Active steps are also being taken to complete the final sections from Singapore on to Australia. These, it is now hoped, should be ready early next year, thus permitting a through service to be flown between England and Australia, the first timeschedule enabling this 10,000-mile air journey to be accomplished in about twelve days.

Longshoremen Hold Meeting

Portland, Aug. 1.—Leaders of Pacific Coast longshoremen in session here yesterday, expressed approval of a six-hour day for all longshoremen and adopted plans for the participation of all waterfront workers in a Pacific Coast marine council, which would frame a code for submission under the National Industrial Recovery Act.

If the code is adopted it will affect approximately 15,000 longshoremen and 40,000 persons in the marine council, including grain handlers, dock truckers, ferry boat men, steamship engineers, firemen, seamen, masters, mates and pilots' associations and truck drivers using the docks, leaders explained.

G. W. Deal, secretary and business agent of the ferry boat men of San Francisco, was selected chairman of the meeting.

Prominent leaders of the work in attendance included Capt. J. Fox, Seattle, Pacific Coast secretary of the Masters', Mates' and Pilots' Association; J. C. ## Disabled Ship Towed to Port

Seattle, Aug. 1.—After imperiling the lives of eleven persons, ten of them from Seattle, the eighty-foot power schooner Helgeland, which struck a reef on Orcas Island early Saturday morning while bound from this port for the Aleutian Islands, was refloated Sunday and towed to Seattle yesterday by the tug Peerless of the Bellingham Tug & Barge Company. The Peerless pumped out the Helgeland. Temporary repairs were made at Orcas Island.

The passengers of the vessel, who were rescued by Coast Guard patrol boat No. 276, were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hericach and three children, Peggy Jessull and Patsy; A. Ermeloss and Mrs. Vera Ernelos, Mrs. S. E. Wonte, William Gordon and Ecarge Galley, all of Seattle, and William German of Bellingham. They were taken to Anacortes by the patrol boat. ## TELLS OF TRIP IN FAR NORTH

Reindeer Expert Says Winter Was Worst in His Seventeen Years in Alaska

—Winnipeg, Aug. 1.—Wind-tanned and wiry from his 2,096 miles of mushing behind a dog team through the biting blizzards of the Far North, R. T. Porsild, Dominion Government reindeer expert, passed through Winnipeg today. He is traveling by Canadian National lines to Ottawa.

"It's been the worst winter of the seventeen I have spent in the north," Mr. Porsild stated. "The temperature was only thirty-five to forty-five degrees below zero, but the storms were bad and the wolves were worse."

Mr. Porsild, with his brother, A. E. Porsild, represent the Department of the Interior in the transference of a herd of some 3,000 reindeer from the Alaska coast to the Barren Lands of the territories. It is intended that the Barren Land Esquimo be taught to herd these reindeer to replace their disapeparing supply of caribou.

The trek was only 700 or 800 miles, but the trip has taken since Christmas, 1929. Last winter the herd was moved from close to Flaxman Island to Blue River, some 300 miles. While the herd traveled, Mr. Porsild kept them supplied with the necessary provisions from Herschel Island and Aklavik, covering with his dogs, 2,096 miles during the winter in trips back and forth between deer and depot.

"We spoke little of the gruelling hardships of these supply trips through the ice wastes. The storms were bad, but I made my trips so I could stay with Eskimos at night, and didn't have to build my own shelters much," he said. "But it was hard on the herd. There were about 3,000 when they started out from near Buckland River on the Alaska coast, and there are only 2,000 grown deer now." He said he expected the spring increase would mean some 300 calves.
